embraced in the criteria, and therefore have not been prejudiced by the failure of defendants to give proper notice of said criteria.

"8. That there has been no showing of a clear constitutional right to the immediate admission of plaintiffs to the schools of their choice, and that plaintiffs have not shown irreparable injury from a denial of their requests for transfer.

"9. That plaintiffs as well as students whom they would join in the new classes to which transfer is sought would suffer from a transfer at this time, when the current school year is nearly two-thirds completed, when course advancement is not on a parity, and when plaintiffs could not continue in all the courses which they are now pursuing, that such transfers by students in the upper grades could result in failure to complete the prescribed courses for graduation from high school, or in failure to meet college entrance requirements, and that it is not in the best interest of the minor plaintiffs to transfer to other schools in mid-term.
