About Your Home

Encourage your child to | paint. Many psychologists have said for a long time that painting is one of the surest ways to help a child express his feeling for beauty. Your encouragement and interestin his work will make your child feel a real part of the home. It will also help him to meet the adult world on his own terms. Suitably framed, your child's picture will be an interesting addition to almost any room in your home. At worst it will be a conversation piece. By encouraging children to create, you are helping them to a fuller, richer life. The joy their child will get from having one of his pictures beautifully framed and being in the home will be reward enough to most parents.

is important for the It parents to understand that it does not matter what your child paints nor how accurately. That comes later. At first the rhythm and balance is what counts. Your child will want to please you most of all, so keep this in mind. If your child cannot attend a class, he can paint at home.

struction paper, 18 inches by, 24 inches in assorted colors, a set of poster paints, bristle brushes in 1 inch, 1/2 inch, and 1/4 inch sizes and a cup of water for cleaning the brushes. Perhaps the most important side of all this is that painting will help your child to see more beauty. He will learn to see beauty in such simple things as rocks, tree trunks, and the way paint peels off of old wood. As he grows older this appreciation will grow to include many things of nature and art that some people never learn to enjoy.

Beaded Beauty

All that glitters is fashion, in autumn's after-dark dresses. The spotlight's glow fo-cuses on the beaded beauties. For evening, the dress may be slim, swingy or flowing. It may be short, or long But if it's a new fall fash-ion, most likely it's beaded. Solidly-beaded dresses flash with fashion fire. Deep, beaded collar effects peep, beaded conar effects gleam on other dresses. Or, beads trace glittering pat-terns, such as diamonds, on opulent fabrics.
