Ruth Mercer Circle No. 2

Ruth Mercer Circle No. 2 met at the home of Mrs. J. D. Mode Thursday evening with Mrs. Floyd Bell presiding.

Mrs. Mode, program leader, led the group in a responsive prayer. She presented the program, "Design for Mission."

The church is capable of dealing with the new society and the new world only through what has become its most dominant concern today—renewal. Renewal in the missionary task is evidenced in three ways. First is the ecumenical movement which refers to the whole church taking the whole gospel to the whole world.

Second evidence of renewal is the rise of the younger churches to positions of maturity and authority. The third evidence of renewal is the role of the layman in the mission of the church.

Mrs. Mode called attention to mission work being done in the six continents.

During the business session, Mrs. Bell assigned flowers to be put in the church sanctuary during September. Mrs. Norris Collins gave a financial report.

Mrs. Harry Coulter was welcomed as a new member of the circle. Mrs. Kay Morris was a visitor.

A local WSCS meeting was announced for September 28 and a Sub-District meeting for October 11.

During the social hour, the hostess served a dessert course with coffee. Miss Carroll Mode assisted with serving.

Rural Electric People Help Develop More Skilled Manpower

Among America's biggest capital investments these days is one sometimes overlooked—skilled manpower. Across the country, rural electric apprentice programs train skilled workers; job training and safety programs increase efficiency and save lives; appliance repair and service programs benefit the public as well as provide opportunities for young people, and many other people-improvement programs add to the community's level of learning. Rural electric employees are also attending institutes and workshops to advance their own skills and increase the nation's pool of trained workers at the same time.
