Cooke Named Deacon Of The Year

ELTON H. COOKE

Elton H. Cooke, of the Corinth Baptist Church, Route 3, Louisburg, was named Representative Deacon of the Year by the Tar River Baptist Association in ceremonies held in the Spring Hope High School on last Monday night. Mr. Cooke is the fourth man to be so honored. Other recipients of the award are J. Phillip Murray of the Ephesus Church, Melvin A. Nelms of the Cypress Chapel Church and G. M. Beam, Sr. of the Louisburg Church.

The handsome bronze and wooden plaque was presented to Mr. Cooke by Melvin A. Nelms, Associational Moderator. In the presentation statement Nelms said that Mr. Cooke "was representative of the large host of deacons who serve in the churches of Tar River Association." Mr. Cooke has served on the Executive Committee of the Association and in many responsible positions in his church including Sunday School Superintendent, teacher of young people and Mission Action Leader in Baptist Men. His pastor, J. Marion Rector, says of him, "He is looked upon as a genuine Christian by both church and non-church people in our community." Cooke is married to the former Gladys Finch. They live in the Ingleside section of Franklin County.

The annual meeting at which Cooke's award was presented is called the Deacon-Pastor Supper and is sponsored by the Associational Brotherhood. D. C. Phillips of Sandy Creek Baptist Church, Associational Brotherhood Director, presided over the meeting. R. Tom Greene of the Baptist State Convention's Stewardship Division was speaker. Special entertainment was provided by a quartet calling themselves "The Parsons Four." Members of the quartet were J. Marion Rector, James Estep, Horace Jackson and Aubrey Tomlinson. Mrs. J. Marion Rector was the pianist. The meeting was attended by around 200 Baptist leaders from Franklin and Nash counties.

George H. Harris, Chairman Of Board Of County Commissioners Passes

George Henry Harris, Chairman of the Franklin County Board of Commissioners, died around 11 P.M. Wednesday night in Franklin Memorial Hospital. Mr. Harris, 64, had been in declining health for several years and had been unable to attend Board meetings since the first of the year.

He was a farmer and lumberman and served as a deacon in the Mt. Zion Baptist Church. He was first elected to the Board of County Commissioners in 1950. Except for a four-year period, 1954-58, he served continuously on the Board representing the Hayesville-Sandy Creek District. He was reelected in 1966 without opposition and his term was to have run until December, 1970.

Mr. Harris was a conservative member of the Board and pointed with pride to his pet project, the three county buildings located at the intersection of NC-56 and Bickett Blvd. He was instrumental in the erection of the Welfare and Health department buildings on the site and assisted school officials in obtaining the Education building on the three-building complex.

He is the fourth member of the Board to die in office in recent history. Howard Pearce, Howard Griffin and Claude Arnold died while serving as Chairmen of the Board.

Funeral services will be conducted Friday at 2 P.M. from the Lancaster Funeral Home Chapel, by Rev. Kenneth Honeycutt and Rev. W. P. Childers. Burial will follow in the Mt. Zion Church Cemetery.

The announcement this week that another new industry plans to locate in the county focuses the spotlight on one of the county's most unheralded agencies. Except when there is an announcement brewing, few people pay much attention to the Industrial Development Commission.

Since its beginning in March, 1961, there have been 13 announcements of new industries, two of which were home-grown. Before Franklin voters approved a 5 cent levy per $100 valuation to support the Commission's work, there were no announcements. The reason was simple. There were no industries locating here. Between 1948 when Ford Metal Moulding located here and 1962, there were no plants announced for Franklin County.

The major break-through came in 1962 when on February 15, the Commission announced that Louisburg Sportswear Company would locate here. The announcement said Sportswear would occupy a 30,000 sq. ft. building and employ upwards of 350 persons. It did this and is now expanding.

Things were quiet after Sportswear for a couple of years. The Commission's work continued, but there was nothing of note to announce. On April 30, 1964 M. Z. Morris of Spring Hope said he would establish the Justice Manufacturing Company at the old Justice Elementary School. He planned to employ 90 people. Justice Manufacturing has since expanded.

In July, 1964 the announcement was made that Gay Products would locate here. In a 46,400 sq. ft. building. Gay would employ upwards of 350 persons. The Gay operation has been most successful here.

On April 15, 1965, Mac Joyner announced simultaneously with the Industrial Development Director the formation of the M. E. Joyner Manufacturing Company. He would locate temporarily in the old Ford Molding building and expect to employ around 40 people. Joyner, a native of Louisburg, has since built a modern plant on Bickett Blvd. and accomplished a significant expansion.

Just under one year later, the announcement came that Diazit, a New Jersey firm, would locate at Youngsville. The 6,000 sq. ft. building located on US-1 would employ 25 persons it was said at that time.

Then on March 29, 1969, it was disclosed that Ben-Bar Electronics would locate in the Lake Donna building at Youngsville. While this one failed to materialize into a going venture, the work by the ID department was still there.

On November 29, 1966 came the really big news in industry hunting. Carolina Fine Woods, a subsidiary of Sylvania Corporation, held a news conference to announce the location here of a 130,000 sq. ft. plant which would employ upwards of 300 persons. The area was leased. On October 13, 1967, the company changed its mind saying that market conditions made it impossible to carry out the plans for the Louisburg plant. The balloon had burst.

But before it did, Composite Structures Corp. announced the location here of a pilot operation to build low-cost housing. It opened shop in the old Youngstown building and struggled along until a few months ago when its operations were shut down. It is still hoped that this idea will come alive again here.

Industrial Development and the people of the area took special pride when on February 2, 1967 Dean Farms, a local industry opened its new plant. The company was founded in 1960 in an old school building in Cedar Rock and grew to one of the county's major industries.

In October, 1967 Mar-Way, Inc. located in the old Hardwick building on Church Street. The firm is in operation daily and, while small, is another feather in the cap of the ID Commission.
