Monument

the Governor's car rode the State Attorney General, who would become the next Governor - Franklin County's own favorite son, Thomas Walter Bickett. Riding with Mr. Bickett was Capt. T. S. Collie, Chairman of the County Board of Commissioners.

Whether late or by design, the parade started at 11 o'clock. The Attorney General's car was followed by the Daughters of the Joseph J. Davis Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy. Behind them marched the Confederate veterans followed by a Mounted Guard from two townships. There were four other Mounted Guard units in the parade and five floats. The floats had such themes as "Spring of '61"; "Tenting"; "Back From The Front"; "The Home Guard"; and "The Return".

The procession stopped at the spot where The Monument now stands. Rev. Duke gave the Invocation. Mr. Bickett acted as Master of Ceremonies for the occasion. He introduced Mrs. J. P. Winston, President of the local U.D.C. chapter, who presented the monument to Mrs. Marshall Williams of Faison, N. C., State President of the U.D.C.

Mrs. Williams spoke of the U.D.C. formed twenty years earlier and told of the 90,000 members in 33 states.

After appropriate words for those being honored, the unveiling was performed by four young daughters of members of the local U.D.C. The girls were Mary Turner, Francis Barrow, Pattie Gee Hill and Beveria Pearce.

Following the unveiling, Mrs. Williams presented the monument, on behalf of her organization, to T. S. Collie, Chairman of the Board of Franklin County Commissioners. While the choir sang, second-grade girls scattered flowers around the base of the 30-foot structure. Franklinton and Louisburg military units fired a volley in salute.

The Monument was left standing alone as the ceremonies moved to the grounds of "the graded school", a few yards away. There, the Governor of North Carolina, introduced by Franklin's illustrious Judge Charles M. Cooke, told the crowd:

"This monument will not be limited to the art of the sculptor. It will speak to men of heroic days. It stands for the soldier in plain ray and he must not be forgotten.

"Generations may come and cycles may fly away, but here under the giant oak, eloquent lips yet unborn will pronounce eulogies upon this beautiful monument.

"No heroism is ever lost."
