Coffee Hour Honors New Members

The Lawrence G. Barefoot home in Green Hill Estates was the scene of a morning Coffee Hour from 9:30 until 10:30 Saturday, April 26, with Mrs. Barefoot, Mrs. Frank A. Read, Jr. and Mrs. Robert B. Fleming entertaining.

The affair was to honor the five new members of the Town and Country Garden Club. Upon arrival, the hostesses presented each honoree with a lovely purple dutch iris corsage. The hostesses greeted the guests at the door and the honorees, Mrs. Charles E. Ford, Jr., Mrs. Ivey Bolton, Mrs. N. Frank Freeman, Jr., and Mrs. J. David Allen received informally in the living room.

Mrs. Read directed the guests and honorees into the dining room where an assortment of pastries were served buffet from silver appointments and Mrs. Robert B. Fleming poured coffee from the silver service. The dining table was centered with a lovely arrangement of spring flowers which were grown by Mrs. Read. The arrangement consisted of Redwing and Charlotte Greely Azaleas, old parchment irises, English boxwood and fern in a silver container.

Goodbyes were said by Mrs. Barefoot and Mrs. Fleming.

He Did

The parachutist was dangling rather forlornly from a big oak tree.

"I was trying to make a record," he shouted to the farmer below.

"Reckon yuh did it, stranger," observed the farmer. "You'll be the fust man in these parts to climb down a tree without to climb up fust."

Veal Dinner A Delight

Change familiar veal cutlets to some fancy veal rolls. Topped with a sumptuous mushroom gravy, these rolls will delight your family and guests alike.

Veal With Mushrooms

- 8 slices Italian-style veal cutlet
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup finely chopped onion
- 1/2 cup chopped parsley
- 2 tablespoons margarine
- 1/2 pound fresh mushrooms, sliced
- 1/4 teaspoon dried basil, crushed
- 3 sprigs parsley
- 1 small stalk celery
- 1 small bay leaf
- Dash pepper
- 1/4 cup white wine
- 1 cup light cream
- 1 tablespoon corn starch

Sprinkle each slice of veal lightly with salt and 1 tablespoon each of chopped onion and parsley. Roll from smaller end and secure with a wooden pick. Meanwhile, melt margarine in skillet over medium heat, or in electric frypan according to manufacturer's directions. Add veal rolls and cook about 10 minutes, turning as needed, or until pale brown on all sides. Add the mushrooms; cover and cook 5 minutes, stirring occasionally. Stir in the remaining 1/2 cup chopped onion, basil, pepper, parsley, celery, bay leaf and wine. Reduce heat; cover and simmer about 15 minutes or until veal is tender. Remove picks from rolls; discard parsley sprigs, celery and bay leaf. Place veal rolls on a serving dish; keep warm. Stirring constantly, gradually add cream to corn starch. Stir into mixture in skillet. Simmer over low heat, stirring constantly, until smooth and thickened. Spoon a little sauce over veal. Serve remaining sauce with the veal.

Flower Judge To Speak Here

Mrs. Omer Utt of Lynchburg, Virginia, a nationally recognized flower arranger and judge, will appear at Louisville College Auditorium May 8 at 3 p.m. to show a variety of flower arrangements and how they are made.

Mrs. Utt's appearance is being sponsored by the Louisville Garden Club.

Health And Beauty

We do not need as much iodine as we need calcium and iron—one-hundredth as much iodine as iron. It is a good thing that our need for iodine is small because it occurs in extremely small amounts in food and water.

Iodine is stored in the thyroid for a considerable length of time, cutting down on the danger of over-dose occurring. We are not referring to tincture of iodine, as prepared as an antiseptic, for this is poison.

About three-fifths of the body's supply of iodine is stored in the thyroid gland. It is also used in the lymph glands, the cerebro-spinal fluid, perspiration, chyle (a fluid used in the digestive process), in fluids which collect in the body when abnormal swelling is present, in fluids of the membrane that surround the lungs, and breast milk.

For many years people have known about the relationship between lack of iodine and goiter formation. There are other diseases that are believed to be due to iodine deficiency. In animals a deficiency of iodine has resulted in breeding difficulties.

It is interesting that a pollution of drinking water seems to nullify the iodine in the body.

There is much disagreement about the amount of iodine one needs every day, and no set minimum daily requirements have been established. But it is approximately from .04 to .10 milligrams. If you live in an area where goiter is common, your family doctor may give you an iodine supplement. However, iodine prepared as a drug or medicine must be very carefully prescribed, for an overdose can be extremely serious.

If you live in a goiterous region and take very little salt in your diet such foods as asparagus, chard, turnip tops, seafoods, and fish liver oil are rich in iodine.
