Garden Time

When jonquil leaves turn brown they are ready to dig, divide and replant. If they have been dug and divided at least once in the last three years, you may wish to leave them alone for another year of blooming. If you lift the bulbs every year, they should be stored in a cool dry place.

Keep your tomato plants tied to the stakes as they grow. Use pieces of torn cloth or soft string and do not tie the stems too tightly against the stake. Prune by removing the young shoots as they form in the axils of the leaves (where the leaf stems join the main stem). Keep well mulched with pine needles or clean grain straw and water as needed.

Don't expect too much from your plants if they are growing in your backyard where they may be shaded and competing with tree roots for moisture and nutrients. They prefer full sun.

Watch carefully for lacebugs on pyreantha, azalea, Washington hawthorne, rhododendron, etc. Dust thoroughly, especially undersides of leaves, with five percent malathion dust. The same treatment will control spider mites (red spiders) and aphids (plant lice) on roses, azaleas and many other ornamentals.

The know-how is less important than the do-it-now.

Ports Of Call

By Edward H. Sims

June is a perfect month to see the Shenandoah Valley. From the national capital, which would be the starting point of an automobile drive, one can drive west to the start of the southerly tour on one of three roads.

The super highway is 66, going through Arlington and out by Manassas National Park and on to Front Royal. But the super highway is not yet completed and several lesser roads must be utilized from Manassas on.

A bit further to the north, one can take route 50 almost to the Shenandoah River turning south just before crossing and on into Front Royal. Or, one can take an even more southerly route, out super highway 29 all the way to the rolling horse country at Warrenton, then on 211 and 522 back up to Front Royal.

Unless you are traveling on a dual highway, any of these drives will take longer than expected for the roads in this hilly country are not what one might desire. But they are worth the time, for the country is some of the most picturesque in the nation.

Front Royal is where the ride down the Shenandoah begins. Shenandoah National Park extends for some sixty miles to the southwest, ending near Waynesboro and just a short distance from historic Charlottesville. One can drive down the center of the national park for a time and turn westward to the Luray and on to New Market in the Shenandoah Valley.

At New Market one is on the magnificent super highway 81, which he can follow down to Harrisonburg, Staunton and Roanoke. This beautiful mountain dual-lane can be followed on through and west of the Appalachians into eastern Tennessee. It is good route into South Carolina, if one's destination is there or Florida.

Robert Pondexter, Jr., n/m/27, speeding. $11.00 fine and costs.

Wyatt Nathaniel Mitchell, n/m/27, failing to dim headlights; improper muffler. $10.00 fine and costs.

The following pleaded guilty under waiver statute, to speeding and paid $5.00 fine and costs each: Ken William Gaddy, n/m/30; Wade Columbus Lewis, III, w/m/21; Edward Jerome Bishop, w/m/31; Chester Marvin Hart, w/m/47; Willie David Crenshaw, n/m/24.

The following pleaded guilty under waiver statute to public drunkenness and each paid $5.00 fine and costs: Willie Lee Blacknall, n/m, Robert Edgerton, n/m/56; Steven Edward King, w/m/24; William Jeffrey Arnold, w/m/32; Charlie F. Perry, n/m; Hank Bell, w/m; and James Hartsfield, c/m.

In Fashion

And now the big brim is coming back in style for men's hats. The hat companies have to live and live well so those of you who have headgear in good shape but with very narrow brims will soon feel the necessity of putting them aside for one of the new western types or a British number.

About Your Home

With building conditions what they are today, many of us will be postponing that dream house. High costs make it wiser for many of us to make do with what we have.

However, don't let this get you down. Much can be done to improve the old house or rented apartment. These improvements can cost a lot less than starting from scratch somewhere else.

When remodeling an old house, the most important thing to keep in mind is that the old and the new must be skillfully blended. Don't feel that every inch of a fine old house is inviolate and that changing it would be a sacrilege. Changes that will better adapt the house to the family's needs should be made. Turn a deaf ear to sentimental warnings against changing the lines or spoiling its authentic style.

Most apartments can be snipped out of the doldrums by changing the surface materials such as paint, paper and fabric. It is seldom necessary to change the furniture or structure.

Many unsightly architectural details can be changed to pleasing ones with skillful use of wallpaper. Paint can create a perspective and make a small, cut-up room look spacious.

New fabrics will make old furniture look almost new. Cover an old tufted-back chair in a modern fabric with a metallic sheen. Use a nubby, textured fabric on the old wing chair. You will be delighted with the results.
