Social Service Eligibility Requirements Changed

North Carolina's 100 county departments of Social Services are in the process of notifying public assistance applicants who have been denied aid since July 1, 1968 as result of the one year residence requirement that they may now be eligible for financial assistance.

This action is being taken because of the Supreme Court decision of April 21 which rendered this requirement unenforceable in North Carolina and 38 other states that have residency requirements.

The State Department of Social Services has been notified by Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare Robert H. Finch that states are prohibited from imposing durational residency requirements as a condition of eligibility for public assistance under the public assistance titles of the Social Security Act.

The Regulations, published in the FEDERAL REGISTER, cover all Federal-State public assistance programs. They prohibit states from imposing, as a condition of eligibility for assistance, any residence requirement that excludes any individual who resides in the State. A resident of a State is defined in the regulations as: "One who is living in the State voluntarily and not for a temporary purpose, that is, with no intention of presently removing therefrom. A child is in 'residency in the State' if he is making his home in the State. Temporary absence from the State, with subsequent returns to the State, or intent to return when the purposes of the absence have been accomplished, shall not interrupt continuity of residence."

The regulation requires that North Carolina and the other 38 States involved notify within 90 days of June 3 all applicants who were refused aid because of the residency requirement.

It has been estimated the ruling could make an estimated 100,000 to 200,000 additional people eligible for public assistance across the country. The North Carolina Department of Social Services does not feel that too many people will be involved in North Carolina.

Ag. Extension News

July and August are the most difficult months to breed sows according to L. D. Baldwin, Agricultural Extension Agent. This is due to extreme summer heat. Litter size also tend to be reduced during this time as compared to sows bred during the fall and winter.

The following are some tips that should facilitate breeding the sows and might also increase litter size.

1. Provide plenty of shade and water for animals to be bred.
2. Restrict feed intake to four pounds of feed per sow per day.
3. Have enough "boar power" to get the job done. One boar per six sows to be bred in one week is a good rule of thumb.
4. Practice hand breeding -- breed sows twice 24 hours apart.
5. Keep boars as cool as possible, provide plenty of shade. Use foy nozzles if possible.
6. Work boars at day break when it is cool. If boars must work more than once per day, work them again at sunset.
7. Never feed boars prior to working them. It's best to feed after they have worked in the early morning. Feed 6-8 pounds of feed per day.
8. Sprinkling boars with hose helps keep them cool while working.
9. Remove sows to a cool place after breeding. Most embryonic death occurs the first three weeks after breeding.

CT&T Initiates New Service Program

Tarboro -- A new program designed to assist Carolina Telephone in maintaining high quality service has been inaugurated.

Howard Pitts, local manager, said the company will mail a questionnaire to certain telephone customers who will be selected on a random basis. The questionnaire will cover work items performed by the company, and the results will be used to determine if the performance is up to company standards and has met the subscribers' requirements.

Such items as "Was the work completed to your satisfaction?" and "What is your frank opinion of the overall service furnished by our company?" are included.

Pitts said that he hopes those customers who receive questionnaires will take just a few minutes to complete them and drop them in the mail. No postage is required by the customer to return their comments.
