Walk On Moon Planned

Space Center, Houston, Tex. Astronauts Charles Conrad and Alan Bean, scheduled to land on the moon next month in Apollo 12, plan to make long walks on the moon. Present plans are to walk 150 feet down a sloping crater wall to retrieve parts of an unmanned Surveyor space-craft that has been there over two years.

Sound plans are essential in the accomplishment of any program, whether national or individual.

About Your Home

It takes a certain amount of skill and know-how to do a good job of carving roasts, hams and birds. There is no point in making the job harder by not having the proper tools and a knowledge of the correct way to cut different kinds of meat.

One important requisite is a big platter. Never put the roast or chicken on a small plate surrounded with potatoes, peas and such. It is too much to expect the carver not to slosh under these conditions. The serving platter should be placed to the corner, and skewers and cords should be removed before the meat is brought to the table.

There must a good standard carving set with a two-pronged fork and knife with a semiflexible blade and a pair of poultry shears. Remember, the knife needs to be sharpened by a professional every so often.

When carving beef, cut toward you letting the knife slide on the forward stroke-- don't saw back and forth.

Roast leg of lamb and ham are more often massaged than any other meat. To carve either of these meats the protruding bone should be on the carver's right, with the bone pointing up. The cutting must be done against the grain.

Carving a turkey, a roast chicken or a duck is about the same. Place the bird on the platter breast up, with the legs to the carver's right. Insert the fork at the top of the breast with the prongs straddling the breastbone. First cut off the second joint and drumstick together. Carve these if you like--next remove the wings. Now it's time to slice the breast meat--from the top down.

Keeping in mind these simple rules, all it takes is a lot of practice.

Good Question

A mother was telling her sixteen-year-old son about the golden rule.

"Always remember," she said, "that we are to help others."

The youngster mulled this over for a minute and then asked:

"Well, what are the others for?"
