The Evening Post. WILMINGTON, N. C. Saturday. September 20th, 1873.

WE return our thanks to our friends for their many kind words of encouragement received the past month, and for so many new subscribers. We are always happy to receive either. THE POST is steadily growing, and if it continues increasing in patronage in the same ratio for the next sixty days as it has in the past sixty days, we expect to enlarge it. We shall not do this, however, merely to make a show, but to accommodate our increasing business .--Until a change is absolutely needed, it will not be made. The people are accustomed to see our little Evening Daily come to them every afternoon, and we hope it comes a welcome guest. It certainly goes out from the press with kindly feelings to all, even to those who read it without paying for it. On this point we differ from many of our brethren of the press. Although we of course prefer to see all men who read the paper subscribe for it, yet if they feel they cannot afford to pay for it, we are always glad to have them read it. They which they can increase their worldly their paper. Who knows?

been entirely too much speculation, especially on the part of some of our leading bankers. Jay Cooke & Co. unfortunately yielded to the temptation, and they have been swept away in the current. They were so strong and so confident that they undertook of themselves and by themselves to carry out the most gigantic enterprises, enterprises which would tax the strength of a Government even as strong as our own. But in their fall it is to their honor that they alone are the sufferers. The Northern Pacific disaster does not involve any material loss to anybody excepting to themselves. Their suspension is one for which they need not blush. The latest information on the subject is to the effect that the pending trouble is only temporary, and that the firm will resume business in a few days, an expectation which it is to be hoped will be realized.

Jay Cooke & Co.-History of the firm -Foundation of the Different Hou

The firm of Jay Cooke & Co. consists of Jay Cooke, Henry D. Cooke, W. G. Moorehead, H. C. Fahnestock, Pitt Cooke and J. H. Garland.

There are four banking houses under the control of the firm-the present bank, which was established at Philadelphia in 1858 by Jay Cooke and W. G. Moorehead; the Washington branch, which was founded in 1862; the New York branch, organized in 1866, and the London house, established in 1871, under the immediate supervision of Hon. Hugh McCulloch, formerly Secretary of the Treasury, and Col. J. H. Puleston.

Pitt, Jay and Henry D. Cooke are the sons of the late Hon. Eleutheros Cooke n 1833—'34. Pitt Cooke, the eldest brother, was engaged in commercial business in Sandusky, and subsequently was connected with the Philadelphia banking house, as it agent for the location of land warrants in the West, in which the firm were large dealers. He afterwards became connected with the New York house, of which he is still a member. Jay Cooke, the senior partner of the firm, left Sandusky in 1840, when about eighteen years of age, and entered as a clerk in the broker's office of E. W. Clark & Co., of Philadelphia, of which he afterwards became a member, and retired therefrom with capital of about $250,000, then considered quite a large fortune. Henry D. Cooke was educated at the college in Meadville, Pa., and in 1845 went with his brother-in-law, W. G. 1849, and subsequent years. While in San Francisco, and largely engaged in business, he was a heavy depositor with Palmer, Cook & Co., bankers, and lost all his accumulated wealth by their failure. In 1853 he edited and published the Sandusky Register, and in 1858 he went to Columbus and purchased a controlling interest in the Ohio State Journal, conducting both papers with marked ability until the election of Mr. Chase to the Senate of the United States. In 1861 he came to Washington with Mr. Chase, and when that distinguished statesman was appointed Sec-retary of the Treasury he designated the firm of Jay Cooke & Co. to place the seven-thirty bonds- a patriotic task which was successfully fulfilled by Henry D. Cooke, as agent of the firm, which was largely instrumental in maintaining the credit of the country in its darkest and most trying days. Probably no banking firm in the United States was better known or more confided in, both at home and abroad, than that of Jay Cooke & Co. Their credit, their honor and integrity were never impaired or impeached; and hence the present suspension, although it is hoped and believed to be only temporary, will startle the whole country and fill all hearts with regret.-National Republican.
