Laugh More.

"Why don't you laugh, mother?" said a little three-year-old daughter, as her mother, with rather a clouded countenance, was dressing the little ones. The earnest tone of the child provoked the wished-for laugh, and the little heart was happy.

And, mothers, I fear we do no

laugh enough. The housekeeping is so onerous, the children so often trying the nerves and temper, the servants most exasperating, and even John, kind, good husband as he is, cannot understand all our vexations and discouragements, and so wearied and worried, we often feel that it is too much for the household to depend on us, in addition to all our cures, for on sale at Salisbury, Statesville, Asheville and the social sunshine as well. Yet the household does, and it must. Father may be bright and cheery, his laugh ring out, but if mother's laugh fails, even the father's cheerfulness seems to lose much of its infection. Among the enterprises of Franklin is he manufacture of the Greenwood Ear protector. Some five years ago Chester A. Greenwood, Yankee like, found that his ears painfully sensitive to our winter northwesters, and instead of deserting the land of his nativity he set himself to work in devising a protector. The machinery for its manufacture he invented and made himself, and he made and introduced into the market enough to secure public favor. The business has grown, and this year his brother E. Greenwood, is in company with him, the firm being Chester A. Greenwood & Co. They have fitted up a two story shop, having made all new ma-chinery for the different operations eightteen being used. The machinery is driven by an engine of three horse power. They are manufacturing 50,000 pairs for this years trade, making 1000 a day, employing ten hands, mostly females, in the shop, and some six or eight out of the shop. Mr. Greenwood has his invention patented in this country and in Canada .- Mining Journal.
