The Climate of North Carolina.

Washington C. Kerr, State Geologist.
The climate of North Carolina corresponds to that of Northern and middle Italy and Southern and middle France, being tempered on one side by the Atlantic ocean and on the other by the high peaks and table lands of the Appalachian mountains. And as the State has so great a length from east to west, as well as so considerable an elevation towards the interior (3,000 and 4,000 feet), the range of climate is very great, from subtropical on the coast, within the influence of the Gulf stream, to cold temperate on the table lands of the West. The isothermal in the one case, (at Smithville, the extreme southeast), being 66 degrees (that of Alexandria, in Egypt) and in the other (at Boone, the higher mountain plateau in the West), about 51 degrees, which is that of New York and Paris, France; that of the plateaus about Grandfather mountain forty-five degrees, which corresponds to Ontario, Canada, and Susquehanna; the middle region falling under the line 60 degrees, which is that of Nagaska, Athens, Gibraltar, &c.

The average fall of snow for the winter is six inches. The average number of days of fog for the year is but two. No part of the State is subject to the destructive gales. The average number of fair days per year is 132; of rainy days 100, leaving 133 to be classed as partly cloudy.

Raleigh is very nearly of the temperature of Florence, Italy. Beaufort is almost exactly of the temperature of Geneva, Italy. Smithville (on the sea coast below Wilmington) is almost identical with that of Nicosia, Sicily. Asheville (in the mountains), has a temperature very like that of Venice, Italy, and Bordeaux.

At The Fire.

It is strange how absent minded some people become when an alarm of fire is given. One prominent leaf dealer who rooms near where the fire originated Sunday night, on seeing the warehouse on fire, got up, bathed, shaved, put on his Sunday-go-to-meeting clothes, parted his hair in the middle, put on his kids and walked out to view the rains. Another young man got up locked, his door, threw the key out, called up his "pups" and attempted to train them to catch rats. An old gentleman put on three pair of pants, two coats and his wife's night cap. Another one was so frightened he only put on his slippers and hat, which made him look very much like a ghost. One of our young bloods thought it would be real nice, diked out in his best suit, white neck tie and wore a large button hole bouquet, marched down to the scene. He became a little too careless and got in front of the muzzle of the Chemical engine hose, he was soon whitewashed and all the starch taken out of him. He left for his room a sadder and wiser man.—Durham Recorder.

CUTTING AFFRAY IN CONCORD.—A very serious cutting affray occurred at the depot in Concord last Saturday night in which Mr. Dock Corzine was badly backed up by two brothers named John and Joe Orthage, two factory hands. The parties became involved in a quarrel, when the two brothers jumped on Corzine and stabbed and cut him in four or five places. Corzine's injuries were dressed by a physician who pronounced them serious, but not thought to be fatal. At last accounts the officers had not succeeded in arresting the two Orthage brothers.—Journal-Observer.

In the economy of a well regulated family nothing should be allowed to go to waste. And the Spanish government acting on this assumption, has issued a proclamation that says: "All articles in the shape of wine, groceries and provisions, which upon examination and analysis, are proved to be injurious to health will be confiscated forthwith and distributed to the different charitable institutions." That is something like a certain Sunday school festival committee, which upon finding the oysters they had provided were bad, ordered them to be sent to the Home for the Friendless.

Give close personal supervision to every department of your business; "the master's eyes are worth both his hands."

Something to Cry Over.

Dr. John Hall, in an article entitled, "A Thing to Cry Over," touches in a pathetic manner the common habit of laughing at drunken men. Dr. Hall stood on a boat in New York harbor. Not far off was a well dressed but tipsy young man. Beside the doctor was a plainly dressed man. When Dr. Hall saw the people laughing at the drunkard, he saw in his neighbor's eye such a sad, pitying look, that he said to him: "They should hardly laugh at him." Said the man: "It is a thing to cry over." Then he told Dr. Hall of his own wife, who took to drink in Scotland, and who promised to reform if he would come to this country, but did not, and died of drunkenness, and when the doctor hoped that he had comfort in the children, he said: "One, the second, is; she is a good child. The oldest is not steady—I can do nothing with her; and the youngest, a boy, can't be kept from drink. I've sold my place, and am going to a town in Ohio, where, I am told, no liquor can be had—to try to save him." Dr. Hall closes as follows: "Who would not wish for abstinence societies, tracts, books, ministers, sermons, young people's pledges, humane laws? One almost cries out for anything that will stop this slow, cruel murder of home love, of men, of women, of little children, of home, of peace, of immortal souls."

Frogs.

A London (Ky.) scientist, according to the Electric World, sings the praises of the frog, and accidentally refers to the part the humble batrachian has played in the development of electrical science: "Even in the benighted age in which Galvani lived it had been discovered that frogs' legs were good to eat. He had a pair of them hanging on a copper nail, and occasionally the wind would blow them against an iron railing, and they would jerk convulsively whenever contact was established. Galvani noticed it, and set his wits to find out the cause. Everybody knows the history, although it is a long one, and everybody knows that from that simple occurrence, and through the defunct frog's instrumentality, we have the telegraph monopoly, the telephone, (with the wires crossed half the time and the other half something the matter with the transmitter,) the electric light, which doesn't burn on cloudy nights, and many other blessings of life. The world owes all these things to the simple fact that a frog's hind legs are good to eat."

The Sweetest Joys.

Very many of the sweetest joys of Christian hearts are songs which have been learned in the bitterness of trial. It is said of a little bird that he will never learn to sing the song his master will have him sing while it is light in his cage. He learns a snatch of every song he hears, but will not learn a full separate melody of his own. And the master covers the cage and makes it dark all about the bird, and then he listens and learns the one song that is taught to him, until his heart is full of it. Then, ever after, he sings the song in the light. With many of us it is as with the bird. The Master has taught us, and we learn only a strain of it, a note here and there, while we catch up snatches of the world's song and sing them with it. Then He comes and makes it dark about us till we learn the sweet melody He would teach us. Many of the loveliest songs of peace and trust sung by God's children in this world, they have been taught in the darkened chamber of sorrow.—Christian Weekly.

It is reported here upon what is considered good authority, that a short time since a party of four were seen playing cards upon the banks or near Cape river, in Yancey. But little was thought of the circumstance at the time, and it was soon forgotten, till several young men went to the river to bathe, when they discovered the body of a young man. The corpse had a white tied around the neck to the end of which there was or had been attached a weight and the body sunk in the stream. There were nine stabs on the body. The body was recognized as that of the young man who was seen playing cards. The others have fled the country talking with them or secreting the goods belonging to the deceased. We withhold names till the truthfulness of the reports can be ascertained.—Bakersville Democrat.

We suspect that the amount of hides tanned at the Tewkesbury Alms House, and which have been discovered by Governor Butler's eye, has been the means of braving the market and the immediate cause of the numerous failures in the leather trade.—Weekly Proof Sheet.

Poor Richard's Maxims.

God helps them that helps themselves. Sloth, like rust, consumes more than labor wears, while the used key is always bright. A little neglect may breed great mischief. Drive your business; let it not drive you. A fat kitchen makes a lean will. If you would be wealthy think of saving as well as getting. Beware of little expenses; a small leak will sink a great ship. There are no gains without pains. Diligence is the mother of good luck, and God gives all things to industry. If you would have your business done, go; if not send. Not to oversee workmen is to leave them with your purse open. If you would know the value of money go and try to borrow some; for he that goes a-borrowing goes a-sorrowing. Pride is as long a beggar as want and a great deal more sappy. It is easier to suppress the first desire than to satisfy all that follow it. If you will not hear reason she will surely rap your knuckles.

THE APEX OF HONESTY.—At a party one evening, several contested the honor of having done the most extraordinary thing. A reverend gentleman was appointed judge of the respective pretensions.

One produced his tailor's bill with the receipt attached to it. A buzz went thro' the room that this could not be outdone, when a second proved that he had just arrested his tailor for money that he had lent him. "The palm is his," was the general cry. Then a third put in his claim: "Gentlemen," said he, "I cannot boast of the feats of my predecessors, but I have returned two borrowed umbrellas."

"This is the very acme of honesty," exclaimed the arbitrator, "it is an act of virtue of which I never new one capable." "Hold!" cried a fourth, "I have done still more than that." "Impossible," cried the company, "let us hear." "I have taken my county paper twenty years and always paid for it in advance." He took the prize.

EXCURSION "BUSTED."—The excursion under the auspices of the colored M. E. Church authorities to have gone from this place to Columbia, S. C., last Saturday was a disastrous failure. A sort of mortgage was placed upon the church property to raise the money to pay the forfeiture, $600, the managers obligating themselves to pay $600 more before the train started. This last $600 they failed to raise and after trying in vain all day finally had to give it up losing of course the forfeit of $600, which the railroad pocketed.

THE ROADS.—The magistrates, at their meeting on Monday by a vote of 17 for and 13 against, adopted the road law passed by the Legislature last winter. Let "well done" be said for them by every progressive man in Cabarrus county. The Commissioners will meet again next Monday, to appoint supervisors and put the machinery in motion, so that the repair of the roads can commence as early as possible.—Concord Register.

THEY FEEL INSULTED.—Among those who are in a foaming rage over the shibboleth, "Turn the rascals out," a dozen or two stalwart editors who hold offices are making themselves most conspicuous. Is it not possible for them to find consolation in the reflection that "Turn the rascals out" does not apply to anybody but "rascals"? Or is it this reflection that makes them howl!—Washington Post.

NO CROPS IN THE CYCLONES WAKES.—It is stated as a fact, and is a matter of study for scientists, that the corn and vegetables planted in the path of destructive cyclone of May 12 will not grow. Farmers along the line of its travels in Morgan county declare the statement to be true, and say that corn and potatoes planted in the "cyclone ground" will not even sprout.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

THE ROYAL YACHT.—Admitting that Mr. Arthur has the royal prerogative to seize and use government property wherever he finds it, what right has he to turn over a vessel belonging to the navy to the pleasure of his daughter and sister? There is no great amount of money involved in this, but there certainly is some principle.—St. Louis Post Dispatch.

Oh ye editor, who worketh night and day for filthy lucre and a reputation, both of which by one bad article, can be sent higher than a cock kicked Chicago. Why do ye not "knock somebody out" and start a "gin mill" in the puritanical city of "brown bread and baked beans," a la Sullivan, and by one fell swoop—upward—mount the pinnacle of fame.

Use your credit sparingly. It may serve a useful temporary purpose, but pay-day is sure to come and you should always be prepared for it.

It is said that the Weehawken dueling ground, on the west shore of the Hudson river, at one time so much frequented by those of sanguinary intent, is now hard to identify. There it was that Hamilton fell. Oliver H. Perry also fought a duel on or about this same spot with Marine Captain Heath, 1818. Alexander Hamilton's son fell there two years before his father, in a duel where he was, if possible, more the aggressor than his father; young Hamilton and General Hamilton were shot in nearly the same portion of the body, on the side just above the hip. Aaron Burr had fought on the same ground four years before he killed Hamilton, with the latter's brother-in-law, John B. Church, for slandering him; Church's bullet went through Burr's coat. De Witt Clinton fought John Swartwout on or about the same dueling ground the year before Hamilton was killed, and shot Swartwout, who was Burr's strongest henchman, twice in the leg, and even then Swartwout wanted another shot, and Clinton had literally to leave the field without completing the satisfaction demanded. These are but a few of the duels fought on this famous Weehawken ground.

Jeff Davis sneers at Judge Black because "like Job's war-horse, he snuffed the battle afar off." Did Mr. Davis himself, asks the Boston Herald, get any nearer to "the blood and smoke of battle" than when he ran away from Richmond, clutching the rattling remainder of the Confederate treasury?—Baltimore American, Rep.

Mr. Davis witnessed one or more of the battles of the war. He was on the field at the first battle of Manassas. His regiment of Mississippi Rifles did magnificent work at Buena Vista and turned the tide of battle, as we can show. Old Jerry is not afraid of gunpowder, we may believe, or of any foe. But Davis has shown his heroism.—Wilmington Star.

The Paducah, Ky., Journal cautions its business firms when writing, thus avoiding the giving of free notices as reading matter. Some do so unwittingly and to help fill up, but it is to advertising that a publisher must look to get something to "fill up the mouths of those dependent upon him for support. It would be well to bear this hint in mind when writing for your local paper.—Proof Sheet.

RULE TO MEASURE CORN IN A CHUR.—Multiply the length of the crib in feet by the height of the crib in feet, and the product by the width of the crib in feet, then take five-twelfths of this product and you will have the number of bushels. If the corn is extra good, divide by two, which will give the number of bushels of shelled corn.

Leather medals will be scarce and high priced this Fall, and the country editor who gets one in return for "puffing" beets and pumpkins at his country fair will have something worth keeping.—Proof Sheet.

The speaker who alluded to his candidate as "the war-horse that snuffed the battle from afar," climbed up to the composition room with a club after reading it in the paper as "the war boss that snatched the bottle from the bar."

Durham Recorder: The Grand Jury at the last term of the Inferior Court at Oxford presented every supervisor of public roads in Granville county. It will be remembered that the Justices of the Peace are the supervisors.

On one side of an ordinary postal card a French stenographer has written 44,031 words. They are contained in 275 lines, an average of 160 words to each line. Thus every line contains about as much matter as a page of a 12mo. volume! The space for the words had to be calculated, and this calculation forms a frame to the wonderful card.

Says the Monroe Enquirer and Express: On Sunday last five boys of this place, aged from 15 to 18 years respectively, ran away from home, their avowed destination being Texas. They walked up to Charlotte Sunday evening, spending the night there. On Monday night four of them returned home, one only continuing his flight. Several of these boys are said to have been inveterate readers of dime novels.
