

Tricking the Condor.

How a New York Boy Got Them Within Revolver Range.

Ned Corney, of Clyde, N. Y., recently returned from South America with considerable money. When asked how he made it he said: "Shooting condors in Chili. The government pays $5 for every condor's head brought in, but most of the hunters get sick of the business. The condors are thicker than buzzards, but they can see a rifle further than a man can see a house, and they catch on to all sorts of ambushes in the neighborhood of a dead carcass almost before they are made. The nests are 12,000 feet above the level of the sea, so it's little use to hunt them in the mountains. They are trapped occasionally, and some are poisoned, but as a rule the business doesn't pay, and the condors increase in numbers."

"How did you manage it?" He was asked.

"By playing off sick. Along the coast there are great stretches of sand without vegetation, which are perilous to cross at all times, because of the heat and the liability of getting lost. It was my plan to start out at night, well provided with water, and seek a place under a big rock where I could find shelter and to which I could return by landmarks. At mid-day I would start out in the broiling sun, walking briskly and describing a large circle. It was very easy to stagger after a while and fall, and then get up and stagger on again, keeping a good look out for the birds all the time, lest one should suddenly light on me from behind. It would take a very short time to bring them swooping around, waiting for the death of what they supposed was a worn out traveller. Many a poor fellow has fallen down there on those sands and been torn to pieces before he was dead."

"When I found them getting thick I'd back up against the rock and throw stones at them and shout as if I was wild with fear, and the great vultures would gather around just out of range of the stones, which I didn't throw very hard, and sit on the sand and look at me sideways. Then was my opportunity. Pulling two navy revolvers from under my coat, I'd let drive at them. They are wonderful in the air, but to get aloft they must first run along the sand with wings spread for a couple of rods. It was a cold day when I didn't get at least three, and one day I captured seven. That was a trick which the condors didn't learn easily."

The Arkansas Coroner's Inquest.

An Arkansas coroner found a drunken man, and, thinking that he had a subject, summoned a jury. Just before a verdict of "cause of death unknown" was rendered, the man got up, dusted his hat and asked: "Have any of you men seen anything of Ted Bryant?"

The coroner was disgusted. "This is a pretty time to talk such nonsense," said he. "You were dead just a while ago, and now, sir, such an action on your part tending to cheat an honest official out of a few hard-earned dollars won't be tolerated by this community."

"It was not my fault, cap'n." "Yes, it was your fault. You could have kept still until this business was over, and still there would have been plenty of time to ask about your acquaintances. You've knocked us out of about fifteen dollars."

"I'm sorry, cap'n. Say, will you set up the drinks if I tumble over now and let the good work go on?"

"Yes, we'll give you a quart." The man laid down and the verdict was rendered, not according to the facts in the case, but in compliance with a pressure of circumstances. As a rule, the Arkansas coroner is an honest man.

REMEDY FOR CABBAGE WORMS.

Prof. Riley announces the discovery of a remedy for the cabbage worm which is easily applied, and, he says, has proved entirely satisfactory with Mr. Erwin, of New York, who first discovered it. It is simple ice cold water applied at mid-day directly to the worm by pouring or sprinkling on them. The insects curl up and roll off dead, and the cabbages are revived by the cooling application. Of course it is best used in the heat of the day. In case ice-water is not at hand, he says very cold spring water will do pretty well. When we think of the effect on our own person a plunge into an ice-bath has in a July day, we will not wonder that the tender little larva of the Pieris-rapae should dump himself into the direct eternity when cruelly treated to a cupful of this "cold pizen."

Hasty Words.

We are again indebted to the Workman for, as we think a most capital article.

Half the actual trouble of life would be saved if people would remember that silence is golden—when they are irritated, vexed or annoyed. To feel provoked at a trifle, when the nerves are exhausted, is perhaps natural to us in our imperfectly sanctified state. But why put the annoyance into the shape of speech, which once uttered is remembered, which may burn like a blistering wound or rattle like a poisoned arrow? If a child be trying, or a friend capricious, or a servant unreasonable be careful what you say. Do not speak while you feel the impulse of anger, for you will be almost certain to say too much, to say more than your cooler judgment will approve, and to speak in a way that you will regret. Be silent till "the sweet by and by"—when you shall be calm, rested and self-controlled.

Above all, never write a letter when you are in a mood of irritation. There is an anger which is justifiable, there are resentments which are righteous; it is sometimes a duty to express indignation. But if you consider the matter, the occasion for putting such feeling on record are comparatively few. They come once in a life time perhaps, and to many unfortunate beings they never come at all. Upon the whole, people—our friends and neighbors and the community of which we form a part—are trying to do the best they can; and in hours of good temper and health life wears a bright and sunny aspect.

Much of the friction which makes the machinery of living move rough and discordant is caused by things too petty to be noticed if we were all in our normal condition. The hasty word spoken in petulance may be explained, forgiven and forgotten. But the letter written in ebullition of wounded feelings is a fact tangible, not to be condoned. There it lies with a certain permanence about it. You have sent it to a friend, who, reading it over half a dozen times will each time find it more cruel and incisive than before. Letters once written and sent away can never be recalled. You cannot be sure that your friend (or enemy) will burn them. Hidden in bureau drawers or in compartments of desks, folded up in portfolios, locked in boxes, these will, it may be, flash up again in sudden feud and fire, months after you have ceased to think of the folly which incited them, or the folly which penned them. Never write an angry letter when you are angry.

All heated feelings seek the superlative as an outlet, and superlatives are apt to be dangerous. So long as we cling to the positive in speech, we are petty safe.

We all need to be cautioned against undue haste in speech, but mothers most of all. It is easy to misunderstand a child; so easy to grieve a little person who is forbidden to answer back; so easy to leave a picture of yourself in the plastic memory which will be photographed there for the remainder of life, and of which you would in coming days be ashamed.—Mastery.

Flirting With a Princess.

Observation of a Correspondent on Intimate Terms with the Royal Family.

From a London Letter in the Chicago Herald.

I caught the Duke of Cambridge the other day in a funny position. I had business with an aide-de-camp and in a mistake went into the Duke's room. He had his easy toggery on and was at the window looking upon the park and grounds of Marlborough House, and oh! shocking! making signals apparently of a most affectionate character to a young lady at an opposite window. In the ardor of his signaling business the Duke had not heard my foot steps on the carpet and I thought the best thing I could do was to discreetly and silently back out. As I did so the lady leaned forward and the sun shone on her face and I recognized the Princess of Wales, who, with some of the youngsters, was sitting in a sort of exposure enjoying a bit of gossip by signal with the old warrior, on whose every movement at this moment the eyes of all Europe were, figuratively, supposed to be resting. Instead of signing warrants creating armies to march forth to destruction, the old boy was diverting himself in his peculiar and unique manner with the young folks of the royal family. I afterwards learned a regular code of signals had been established by the field marshal by which he could communicate with the Prince or Princess.

A young lady graduate at Meadville, Penn., selected the subject for her essay, "Wanted, a Man." The young men may smile over it, but it remains the want of these times. Not a dashing beau with good clothes, or a dude with his hair in place, but "a man" that has resolved to do a man's part in these stirring times when there is much to do.

THE WILD WINDS.

CYCLOPES SWOOP DOWN ON PORTIONS OF MISSOURI, KANSAS AND DAKOTA, AND LAY WASTE TOWNS, FORESTS AND CROPS—A NUMBER OF PEOPLE KILLED AND WOUNDED.

Independence, Mo., June 22.—A cyclone visited the northeastern portion of this country Saturday night. As yet only a vague idea can be formed as to the extent of the damage. At the town of Sibley, on the river, a number of houses were destroyed, among them being the large general store of C. S. Miller, scarcely a vestige of which remains. No lives were lost, though the track of the storm was through the residence portion of the town. Throughout the county forests suffered from the loss of large trees, and grain is more or less damaged. Much of the latter is almost ready for the reaper. The new business house of T. W. Herson, in this city, was blown out of shape. The wind blew a gale, and a driving rain was general throughout the county. The path of the cyclone was from the southwestern portion of the county to the northeast.

Leavenworth, Kansas, June 22.—A tornado accompanied by rain, hail and electricity passed over this city late Saturday night, and it is now rumored that although in the city the only damage was to trees, fences and gardens, in the country it was more severe. A large stock farm belonging to Capt. W. S. Tough, four miles south of this place, was badly wrecked. A large barn was blown to atoms and nine horses buried in the debris. Three were killed outright and all the others severely injured. The second store was blown from the house of Geo. Richardson, but although the family was in the house no one was injured. The residence of John Huckins, about twelve miles from the city, was blown to atoms. The family, consisting of five persons, was scattered about the yard in all directions by the gale, but none were killed. All, however, were injured more or less. The timbers of the house were blown more than a mile. Sheboygan, Dakota, June 22.—Every building in the town was blown over Saturday except the county building, which was held down by the safe. No one was hurt.

Kansas City, Mo., June 22.—The storm of Saturday night did little damage in Kansas City, the most serious being the blowing down of a three story brick building at 18th and Frank streets. The total loss is valued at $4,000, is a gentleman informed. Reports, however, are coming in of serious damage to the growing crops, as well as the destruction of fences and houses, and in some cases of dwellings.

Specials from St. Joseph, Warrensburg, Independence, Cameron, Chillicothe, Bevier, Missouri City, Marshall, Slater and Glasgow, all Missouri towns, all tell the same story.

At Wilson, a Peoria travelling man, lost his life, and the business portion of the town was almost destroyed.

Ravages of the Locusts.

The seventeen year locusts will in all probability prove more destructive than most people have imagined. They are already at work boring into the twigs of young fruit trees in many of the orchards, and the limbs of the trees they have stung are drying up and dying, and the fruit thereon is ruined. They are particularly severe on young orchards. A gentleman informed us that a young peach orchard of 400 trees, which this year would have born its first crop, is the fears ruined. The young fruit is showing up, and will amount to nothing when stung by the locusts. These insects are particularly bad on peach and quince trees, also on young chestnuts and the chinquapin tree. In some places the trees already show the signs of their work, and in a few weeks the leaves will turn brown, and the first heavy wind will break off the dead branches, which will fall to the ground, and from these will come the crop of locusts for 1932.—York (Pa.) Dispatch.

EX-COMMISSIONER LORING, it seems, will have to make good to the government the $20,800 he diverted from the purpose for which it was appropriated in order to expend it in seeds. The first controller informs him that steps will be taken to secure its recovery. His bondsmen are held in $100,000 only. The chief clerk of the agricultural department says there are about 12,000 pounds of the sugar beet seed alone still on hand and he adds with naivete: "The heap does not seem to get any smaller. Sometimes when I look at it I think it is actually growing larger. Several days ago a Georgia farmer wrote us he was in great need of this seed. He had tried in various directions, but could not get any. In his extremity he wrote to the department for two bushels of seed. He got it, and I expect he was as satisfied, or promptness. But there does not seem to be any more farmers wanting beet seed. The great quantity of peas and sorghum seed left over and on hand at the department might be used, the officials say, as chicken feed, but sugar beet seed cannot be utilized in this way or in any other.

TRIOUBLED ABOUT IT.—The Chicago Tribune, Republican, seems to be troubled because some of the Southern States, among them North Carolina, proposes to pension disabled ex-Confederate soldiers, and says that this is in opposition to the spirit of the 14th amendment. We don't see why the Tribune people should be troubled about this as they are not asked to pony up any of the cash wherewith it is done. The Southern people who propose to do it paying the bill out of their own pockets, and not by that, but contributing largely in the way of taxation to paying pensions to Northern soldiers, which they do without a growl. If the proposition came in the shape of asking the Federal government to take Confederates on the pension roll the Tribune might chip in with apparent reason, but as it is a sort of family affair with which that paper has nothing to do, its chip is somewhat out of place.—Char. Observer.

ANOTHER SUIT AGAINST SCHIFF BROS.—Messrs. Phillip and Jonas Schiff yesterday received a notice to that served upon them a week ago by Dr. John H. McAden, but this second notice was served by Messrs. Hammond & Justice, the hardware merchants who occupied the building wrecked by the digging of Schiff's cellar. The notice calls upon them to appear at the next term of the Superior Court to answer to the petition of the plaintiffs. The petition, it is understood, calls for damages from Schiff Brothers for the destruction of a large part of the plaintiffs' stock of goods. Thus two of the much talked of suits are already docketed, and the matter is assuming an interesting shape. The others may be expected to be entered at any time between now and August 1st, on which day the Superior Court convenes.—Char. Observer.

Beautiful Venice has produced another beautiful heroine who saved the life of her murderer husband by rowing in her swift gondola far from the land and the law. It was Venice, Illinois, however, and the heroine was a fish-woman in a catboat.

Call a girl a chick, and she smiles; call a woman a hen, and she howls. Call a young woman witch, and she is pleased; call an old woman a witch, and she is indignant. Call a girl a kitten, and she rather likes it; call a woman a cat, and she'll hate you. Queer sex, isn't it?

Children were born to a mother and daughter at the same time and in the same house in Illinois the other day. The babies were dressed and put in the cradle together. When they were taken up soon after neither mother knew her own child, and to day they are still wondering which is which.—Charlotte Obs.

Bishop Lay, so well-known in this State was operated upon by a company of doctors on Sunday. The operation is called thoracentesis, and the doctors took from his thorax forty ounces of serum, which gave the Bishop much relief. He is resting quietly and comfortably.—Raleigh Register.

Edward Gibson, lord chancellor of Ireland; Right Hon. William Henry Smith will probably be secretary for war.
