PARIS

By WALT MASON-(From Judge.) In that fair and wondrous city, wiere our hats and dresses grow, life every shade of woe. So returning tourists tell us, when they've jou. neyed o'er the foam, and they make he was" us sore and jealous, since we're doomed to stay at home. Ah, we yearn for life Parisian, for the gorgeous French hotels! In our dreams we have a vision of the beauteous damozels, and we hear the bands a-playing boulevardy airs. Odds fish! Then we wake and find we're staying here in Ypsilanti.

that gay and giddy village, where old Aleck Dumas wrote! Where the brigands, bent on pillage, so politely take your goat that you're glad to spend your dollars, and you say, "So help me, Maud, they are gentlemen and scholars, and I'm glad they swiped my wad!" There the thing that is unpleasant is so beauti- seases. fully done, he would be a churl or peasant who would kick at being Oh, the splendor and the glory of that town appeal to me! I grow weary of Empory when I think of gay Paree! Here in Kansas it is shocking how we drag out dreary lives, and we always set folks talking if we kidnap neighbors' wives. Here we labor in the daytime, and the day ends when we sup; over there the night is playtime, and by day they sober up. And the hats girls wear in Kansas only cost a dollar each, and the man is jugged who glances three times at a village peach; and a wife will raise a quarrel if a husband spends a dime. and we're all so beastly moral that. a cigarette's a crime. So we often long for Paris (you must here pronounce the name just as though it rhymed with Harris) and the glad Parisian game. There the gentlemen and ladies have some freedom, every day, and the all can go to Hades in their own delightful way; they can wassail hold and revel, till King Death says, "Mosey, now!" and they'll doubtless greet the devil with a Chesterfieldian bow.

I am tired of walking straightly tired of wearing saintly smile; I've been growing restive lately, yearning for the foreign style. I am tired of daily labor, with its worries and its frets; I am tired of wielding faber, I am tired of paying debts. And I'm arcund. weary till I'm weeping of the moral yarns men spin, and I hate this thing of sleeping when I should be drinking gin and generally raising the old Harry without danger from the cops, mainspring stops!

This ambition, though it's recent has a firm grip on my brain, for I'm tired of being decent, and I'm tired of being sane.

SOUND BUSINESS MAXIMS Most men who have amounted to anything started with nothing but ability and determination-a combination which recognizes no man-made limitations.

Any kind of work is better than dleness, which is directly responsible for most of the unhappiness in this Idleness is a dangerous thing; it may grow into a habit that might stick to you after you get back in harness, and the man who loafs on his job is only fooling himself. Eternal, intelligent effort is the price of commercial growth, and where is bound to be retrogression. Business is something like aeroplaning: to stop is to drop and to drop is generally to bust.

If I had an enemy, and wanted to get even with him, I could wish him nothing worse than to land in a soft William Leonard, son of Mr. job and get the loafing habit. It would only be a question of time before he or the job petered out, and the longer he held on the worse off he'd be in the end; for there is a law of compensation which somehow or other makes us work in old age for the time we waste in youth, or suffer if we can't make good. Pin your faith to this law of compensation, but don't take any stock in the law of chance; there's no such thing. Waiting for something to turn up in the relief that things are bound to come your way eventually is throwing dice with fate. Many a good dog never got a decent bone until his

I at once applied your Liniment to the affected part and in less then ten minutes it was perfectly easy. I think it is the best of all Liniments I have ever used."
