Entered as second-class matter Janmary 19th, 1905, at the postoffice at Salisbury, N. C., under the act of Conpress of March 3rd, 1879.

Salisbury, N. C., May 23, 1917

There are numerous complaints of chickens injuring neighbors' gardens. This is an important matter that deserves consideration and people who have chickens should be considerate enough of their neighbors' welfare to keep their chickens at home. It is bad enough to have ene's own chickens scratch up the garden and it is too to tolerate it. No one wants to kill his neighbors' chickens, but the law gives him this right after giving the owner three notices to keep them off of his premises.

A negro woman was haled into court the other day and taxed with the costs for permitting a little poodle dog to run at large without a muzzle on. This is nothing short of the rankest injustice and a specimen of littleness of which an enlightened people ought to be ashamed. There are hundreds of unmuzzled dogs to be seen on cur streets dogs, belonging to people place. who know the law and are perfectly able to purchse muzzles and, if the law is to be enforced, all should be treated alike, or it should be repealed. This thing of dragging some Negro into court and taxing her with costs while the more able and "dlliberate guilty" are allow. ed to go free is a blot on our civilization. We think very lettle of an officer who will show such unjust partiality.

Feur Houses Burned Vesterday.

A rather serious fire on the east side of the southern Railway's main line on Chestnut Hill yesterday morning completely destroyed four cottages and a barn The fire originated in the residence occupied by a Mr Keith and owing to a high wind spread quickly to the adjoining houses on each side, one of which was occupied by Mrs John Trexler and the other by Mrs Morris. The flames then crossed a narrow street and consumed a cottage occupied by Charlie Hartman and also destoyed a barn to the ground. The occupants saved a part of their household goods Other nearby homes were endangered by sparks fanned along and at great distance by the high winds

The nearest hydrant was on South Main streat about two blocks or more from the scene of the fire. The locabetween the Yadkin railway just where it leaves the main line roadbed and the Goodman Lumber Company's plant and first reports coming to the city were that it was the lumber plant burning and a great crowd flocked to the scene. The barn destroyed belonged to Mr Link.
