

JOHN E. WOODARD, | Editors. J. W. LANCASTER,

ure that I make this announcement to demagogue.

Having for several years, before the war, edited the Southern Democrat, a weekly paper published at Graham. Alamance county, Mr. Lancaster can not be considered an adventurer in the journalistic field, but, as those who know him can attest, he is an easy. graceful, and polished writer, and the readers of the ADVANCE are to be congratulated upon the prospect of securing the benefit of his experience and ability.

With the kind co-operation of our friends, we shall both endeavor to make the ADVANCE come fully up to the expectations of its most zealous solicited, have been conferred up or advocates.

JOHN E. WOODARD.

With this issue of the ADVANCE, my connection with it as associate editor for this year, commences. This arrangement will not be allowed to in terfere with my practice of law, but will only impose upon me a certain amout of extra labor. Any law business intrusted to me will be gromptly attended to as heretofore.

of a paper so well and favorably known as the ADVANCE is, if I may not flatter myself with being able to add anything to the high character which it has already attained, it shall be my constant endeavor not to detract from its standard of excellence, or impair its usefulness.

Thoroughly im'ued with democratic principles from early manhood, I shall ever be found battling for their supremacy.

J. W. LANCASTER.

OFFICE SEEKING THE MAN.

There is an old adage more honored in the breach than in the observance' that the office should seek the man. How it may have been with the pre-Adamites or with the Antiedluvians, we can only conjecture-history is silent But since "time whereof the memory of man runneth not to the contrary." men have not been backward in see! ing office, and many have been the tricks and devices they have resorted to, to obtain the coveted prize.

Well authenticated instances however have occurred where offices, un modest men-and still more rare. when they have been declined. At instance of the latter class recently occurred in the appointment of Sena tor from Wisconsin. Senators Gor- try. man and Pryor, the new Senators from Maryland and Alabama, furnish instances, perhaps of the former. It is said that Mr. Gorman, who has just been elected Senator from Maryland, did not mention the subject of his In assuming joint editorial control Candidady to any member of the Maryland Legislature-and that Mr. Pryor, who has just been appoin ted United States Senator from Alabame, as successor to Senator Houston, was never a candidate for any Examples like these are encourage ing to men of modesty and merit and prove that honesty, ability and integrity, even in the scramble fo offices, is sometimes recognized. Since the days when Cincinnatus was called from his plow to assume the government of Rome, popular favor has never been 'misdirected, when it re warded modest merit. And we thin!
