HEARTSEASE.

Of all the bonny buds that blow,
In bright or cloudy weather,
Of all the flowers that come and go,
The whole twelve months together,
This little purple pansy brings
Thoughts of the sweetest saddest things.

I had a little lover once
Who used to give me posies;
His eyes were blue as hyacinths,
His lips were red as roses;
And every body loved to praise
His pretty looks and winsome ways.

The girls that went to school with me
Made little jealous speeches,
Because he brought me royally
The biggest plums and peaches;
And always at the door would wait
To carry home my book and slate.

"They could not see"—with pant and sigh—
The mighty fascination
About that little snub-nosed thing
To win such admiration;
As if there weren't a dozen girls
With more eyes and longer curls."

And never could see clearly,
Why a girl should love me so,
I should be loved so dearly,
So once I asked him why was this?
He only answered with a kiss.

Until I teased him—"Tell me why
I want to know the reason?"
When from the garden-bed close by
(The pansies were in season)
He plucked and gave a flower to me,
With sweet and simple gravity.

"The garden is in bloom," he said
"With lillies, pale and slender;
With roses, and verbenas red,
And fuchsias' purple splendor,
But over and above the rest
This little heartsease suits me best."

"Am I your little heartsease then?"
I asked with dishing pleasure;
He answered "yes" and "yes" again—
"Heartsease and dearest treasure,
And the round world, and all the sea
Hold nothing half so sweet to me."

I listened with a proud delight,
To rare for words to capture;
Nor ever dreamed that sudden blight
Would come, to chill my rapture.
Could I foresee the tender bloom
Of pansies round a little tomb?

Lifelong is some stern experience,
As most of us discover;
And I've had other losses since
I lost my little lover.
But still this purple pansy brings
Thoughts of the sweetest saddest things.

About Practical Jokes.

SOME RECENT HUMOROUS AND HEARTSEASE OCCURRENCES, AND THE LAW CONCERNING THEM.

Not the least curious thing about the attractive subject of practical joking is that whenever, through the stupidity or brutality of a humorous ruffian, a person is killed or disfigured for life, the newspapers chronicle the occurrence under the heading: "A Warning to Practical Jokers." If the wag had been maimed or slain, or if the neighbors had flogged him or lynched him, then there would have been some excuse for the headline. The practical joker's doings take a wide range and are performed at the expense of all classes of the community.

An industrious New York newspaper man has collected the following quite recent illustrations:

In January last Mr. W. T. Timmons, of South Carolina, having been rejected by his sensible sweetheart, undertook to move her heart by writing a letter to the press in another person's name, announcing that his lifeless body had been found at Adams' Run. The only person seriously affected was his brother, who instantly bought a coffin at Charleston and traveled to the spot to discover the hoax.

At Jefferson City, Mo., a stranger put up at the Masonic House and sold the landlord a pair of new boots for three dollars. The landlord's intimate and waggish friend induced a humorous shoemaker, named Joseph Flick, to go and claim the boots, as having been stolen from him, and the hotel-keeper gave them up, and when subsequently he encountered his guest, had him arrested and summoned Mr. Flick as a witness. Then the joke came out, and Mr. Flick had to pay twelve dollars costs while the guest had an action pending for damages for false imprisonment.

In Chicago the other day a somewhat similar but less serious comedy was enacted. A merry lawyer gave a saloon-keeper, who prided himself on his exactness in financial affairs, a two-dollar bill. Received a one-dollar bill in change, then he showed the artist another two-dollar greenback, and went off feeling exultation. All went well till the next visit he gave the saloon-keeper a five-dollar bill, and the saloon-keeper kept the dollar out of it.

In New York City, on election night a jovial politician desirous of amusing

A Teacher Killed by a Pupil.

In an altercation growing out of an attempt to preserve the discipline of a little country school across the river, in Monroe county, Illinois, on Friday afternoon, Robert C. Bailey, the tutor, an estimable young man, resident of Waterloo, was stabbed in the region of the heart by James Emmett McBride, a pupil, scarce 17 years of age, and sinking into a chair, expired within a few minutes. In the presence of a score of terrified boys and girls. The scene of the tragedy was what is known as the McBride school house, situated in the settlement of Yankeetown, six miles southwest of Red Bud, Randolph county, and about thirty miles from St. Louis. From the statements of H. C. Hinkley and T. J. McDonough, residents of Monroe county, the particulars of the tragedy were obtained. Mr. Bailey, the teacher, had occasion to reprimand the boy McBride for a grave violation of the rules of the school, and, according to the statements of the scholars, struck him twice in the face, either with his hand or clenched fist. The boy, in the act, at the time the punishment was inflicted, of sharpening a pencil, and held an open knife with a small blade in his hand. In a towering rage he sprang to his feet and a scuffle ensued, the teacher forcing the boy toward the door. During the struggle the boy was seen to strike twice with the knife. The first inflicted a slight wound over the eye. The second penetrated the chest above the heart. The teacher and boy were near the door at the time. The former was seen to relinquish his hold and the boy ran away. Bailey walked to a chair and said: "I have been stabbed; go for the doctor quick. I shall probably bleed to death." The afflicted children fled in terror. Mr. Anderson, one of the directors, being in the neighborhood, was the first informed of the tragedy. He ran to the scene, but the poor school teacher had fallen from the chair, and lay upon the floor of the school room dead. The boy McBride ran home and told his father, who sent a messenger to Renault for Dr. Channing. He responded promptly but could be of no service. At the inquest the testimony of the pupils was alone heard, and, on the finding of the jury, the boy was taken by his father to Justice Church, who, after a preliminary examination, accepted a $5000 bail for his appearance before the Circuit Court, which convenes in March. After the release on bail, certain citizens were not content with the action of the Justice, and a warrant was issued for the rearrest of the boy, on a charge of murder in the first degree. Bailey, the dead teacher, lived at Waterloo, and leaves an aged mother and sister. He was a young man of great promise, and very popular in the circle in which he moved.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Talk of the Town.

Columbus, Ga., Feb. 4, 1881.

H. H. Warner & Co. Sibs—Your Safe Kidney and Liver Cure beats all the medicines I have ever heard of for kidney and liver diseases. It has cured a genuine case of Bright's Disease here in Columbus (Judge F. M. Brooks), and that is proof enough for me. It is the talk of the town.

A Snake in his Stomach.

Mrs. T. G. Salisbury, of this city, today received a letter from Miss Cora Lee, of Butte, Mont., which contains information of a remarkable statement. The writer is a daughter of Wm. C. Lee, a former well known resident of Minneapolis. After stating that his health is much better than it has been for some time, she says that about a month since her father was awakened from his sleep one night by an unpleasant sensation in his throat. Feeling in his mouth for the cause, he pulled therefrom a live snake, eight inches long and as big as his little finger. The reptile lived for more than an hour, and when disturbed would show fight. Mr. Lee thinks that he took the snake in his stomach five years ago while in the employ of the government in the Yellowstone region. Those who are acquainted with the writer of the letter will not question the truthfulness of the statement.—Minneapolis Journal.

A Smile of Satisfaction.

This from the Cleveland (Ohio) Penny Press, carries its own suggestion: Recently meeting Mr. H. G. Keffler, treasurer of the Cleveland Herald, our representative inquired of that gentleman, after stating his mission, if he personally knew anything about the Great German Remedy, St. Jacobs Oil. A smile played across Mr. Keffler's expressive face and his eyes twinkled merrily as he replied in the affirmative, I will not re-use to state my experience with it, and you may use it as you think best. Four years ago I sprained one of my ankles, an accident which, as you are aware, entails much suffering and sometimes leaves the limb in a condition to remind one frequently of the old hurt. Unfortunately this result ensued. Whenever the water became damp or my system absorbed the slightest cold my ankles pained me. This went on at intervals for over three years, and I could not obtain relief. Last winter I applied the St. Jacobs Oil and it completely cured me. I have not since felt a return of the pain.

Indiana has her own way of dealing with burglars.

On last Sunday night three prowlers tried to enter a house in Tipton, in that State, and instead of getting plunder got a load of lead. The tale is short. All three were killed. That was speedy justice. We have been peculiarly exempt from burglars, and the way to keep so is to be quick on the trigger should they appear among us.

THE VALENTINE.

My valentine's a page of gold,
Upon it, by the morning's light,
I trace new hopes and fancies bright—
So sweetly is the story told—
The old, old story—yet so new—
A little song of love—a voice
That bids my flatterer soul rejoice
A promise to be ever true;
"Oh love, sweet love, this honest heart,
Unknown to coquetry or art,
Hath sworn fidelity to you."
And to my trustful heart I press
My valentine with fond caress,
And now the long, long years have fled
But still, as sweetly as of old,
I read the treasured sheet of gold—
What tho' my love, alas be dead!
And as I read, from yonder sky
An angel with a radiant crown
Comes to my lonely chamber down
Aid bids me dry my streaming eyes.
So, in the soft, decaying day,
I think of him who's far away—
Whose body in the churchyard lies,
And to my broken heart I press
My valentine with fond caress.

THE WHEAT IS LOOKING AS FINE AS A GAL IN THIS SECTION.

Everywhere its verdure and luxuriance show it to be on a sound footing.

When a man gets excited and rants around we say he is vehement. If a woman should do so, could we say she was vehement?

"Do not marry a widower," said the old lady. "A ready-made family is like a plate of cold potatoes." "Oh, I'll soon warm them over," said the damsel—and she did.

"Twenty years ago," says a colored philosopher, "niggers was with a thousand dollars apiece. Now dey would be dead at two dollars a dozen. It's 'stomishin' how de race am deprecating!"

And this is the song of the Wilson county candidate:

"Howdy, howdy, howdy,
How's your wife, and how are you?
It fits my fist as no other can."
The horny hand of the working man."

THE TRENTO (N. J.) GAZETTE.

mentions the case of Mr. John Wood, with the American Pottery Co., that city, who was cured by St. Jacobs Oil of an attack of rheumatism, which had confined him to his bed for seventeen weeks. He praises it unstintedly.

GEORGE, DO NOT COME TO NIGHT.

I would not cause you pain, but oh!
I must command thee darling, go;
And when the pale moon's light
Doth shimmer thro' the waning trees
And on the softly dancing breeze
The tinkling thrubs his refrain,
Come not again—forgive the pain—
George, do not come to-night!

Nay, must I tell thee why?
And dost thou doubt this loyal heart?
"Tis better, George, we should part;
For G, my darling, I
Discover by the pain 'tis making
That horrid vaccination's taking—
Yet if you'll promise on your knees
You will not tease me for a squeeze
To-night, George—you may come.

WARNINGS TO THE VACCINATED.

In these days of vaccination, when the points are in general demand, it will not be amiss to remember the following: "Don't pick your nose with the finger that has shortly before come in contact with vaccine matter. A man in a neighboring village acted contrary to this rule, as a result the matter took kindly to his nose, made the acquaintance of the membranes, spread all through his head, and he is just able to leave his bed after a confinement of more than two weeks. A Glen's Falls lady scratched the bite of an insect on her foot with the fingers that had been touching with her vaccinated arm. The following day her foot swelled. She was crippled. She was crippled for a month, and pined away over the heart-rending prospect of wearing a No. 11 shoe for the remainder of her days, but finally she recovered. These are practical points on vaccine points and will bear the caution they point out.
