

Published Every Friday Morning. Josephus Daniels, Editor and Proprietor.

FRIDAY MORNING, May 5, 1882.

THE ADVANCE this week greets its readers in a much enlarged form with a new spring dress of type.

It is now the largest weekly newspaper in the State, and it will be the Editor's constant effort to make it second to none in point of excellence.

Special care will be taken to make it meet the wants and suit the tastes of a discriminating reading public, believing that the public will give it the reception it merits.

The ADVANCE is no longer a babe in swaddling clothes, but has assumed the full proportions, and taken the responsibilities of a well-developed robust man, and it this week attires itself in man's uniform.

The Editor entering upon these responsible duties so young, feels the increased responsibility imposed upon him, and he has misgivings that he will not be able to make the paper what he conceives it ought to be.

However, he will spare no effort or pains or expense to make the ADVANCE the leading paper of Eastern Carolina, and in this endeavor he hopes to receive the support and cooperation not only of those who have been true and tried friends in the past, but of the whole community and section of country.

It is needless, perhaps, to speak of the future management of the paper. Its readers may rest assured that it will always advocate what it believes to be right, and condemn the wrong wherever it find it.

On questions affecting public interests it will give forth its most earnest and it will always be found leading all its imitators.

The advancement of the country in which it circulates is one of its chief objects, and it is enabled to cultivate its readers, we have no hesitations in saying, and to-day we are gratified and wish to see it prosper.

Federal Aid for State Schools.

It is proposed to make a large appropriation in aid of the Public Schools throughout the United States. The appropriation will stand on exactly the same ground as the appropriations which have been made of late years for the improvement of rivers and harbors.

It will be national in its scope, and proportional to the literacy of the States. It is based on the assumption that the United States has an interest in promoting the welfare of the citizens of the States, and that as the people of the States pay the revenue to support the Government, it is not fair that the General Government should extend its aid to the States in their struggle with ignorance, in other words, that the State and the Federal Government should be mutually dependent.

It is admitted on all sides that we need more money for educational purposes, and the only question is as to the means by which we shall get it. There are two sources from which we may obtain it, provided the proposed legislation is secured. The first is from State taxation, and the other from Congressional appropriation.

But it must be understood that the latter would by no means obviate the necessity of imposing the former. It is not intended to take the place of State taxation, but to supplement it in the same convenient way. The revenue raised for educational purposes in many of the States, particularly in those impoverished by the war, is totally inadequate to provide proper instruction in the Schools, or to establish our common School system on a satisfactory basis.

And while we consider that one people have recently shown a disposition to bear cheerfully additional taxation for that purpose, still it is apparent to all who have looked with care into the system now in vogue, that it will be many years before we can support such a system as we ought to have. The aid proposed will place us at once where it would take us unassisted a dozen years to climb. We have a most illiterate population, and have more need of educational facilities than many of our sister States, and it should seem that since the Government has freed the negro and made him a voter it ought to be incumbent in some degree on the Government to fit him for exercising the right of suffrage.

And among all classes it has been found that the more we have of the right kind of education the more thoroughly do we understand the rights and duties of citizens and the more intelligent do we set about enjoying the one and performing the other. But it is objected that to solicit the aid of the national government in the matter of education will be to yield up in some degree our doctrines of State Rights. We do not think that conclusion follows. We are sure it will not if the fund appropriated is placed under State control. But it should be insisted that the fund be managed and distributed by Federal officers, the only evil that can be present foreseen is the increase of office holders; but not, perhaps, so great an evil as would be our refusal of aid because of an overstrained and sentimental regard for the doctrine of State Rights. We do not think the danger to the States would be materially increased by the proposed measure and common sense would dictate that if we can gratefully accept every cent that falls from the national treasury in the shape of appropriations for dredging all the little ditches and canals in the country, and look on that Congressman or Senator who contrives to have the most Government money spent among us, as doing his constituents most good, we ought not to be doubting Thomases any longer. We regard the great problem of education as being above considerations of a remote and improbable danger to State institutions. Let our people sign the petitions that are circulating, let us have the appropriations, and then let us have the best Schools in the South. No boy or girl in our country ought to be able to say "I was deprived of education because I had no money." Education ought to be so free that no child in all the land should be denied on account of poverty, a participation in its advantages. We must have the appropriation. The whole South will welcome it as the most patriotic and sensible thing Congress has done for many a day.

Communicated.

"Aaron's Rod in Politics."

"Who is your captain?" the Duke of Norfolk asked the crowd. "His name is Poverty," was the answer.

The writer of this article, who read the "Fool's Errand" with pleasure, profit and admiration, was months ago in a manly and intelligent man among his neighbors and friends who could never notice a dog growl or wise in the thought and suggestions of a poetical man.

It is a pity that the "Fool's Errand" should have been so long in the hands of the General Government. Every one familiar with Judge Tourgee's paper and present notional school model, which has made him the "Fool" of America's first, must acknowledge that it is the initial impulse to the idea of education by the Federal Government. Indeed the message of General Grant which first broached the subject to Congress admits its indebtedness to the author of the "Fool's Errand."

True, the idea of supervising South-western education had long been prominent in the Republican mind, as witness the tilt of Senator Blaine with Gov. Vance on the subject of North Carolina School Books, but the idea received its first official recognition in the form approved and presented in the "Fool's" imaginary correspondence with his old preceptor. The next endorsement of the thought was the National Convention of 1880 of which Judge Tourgee was a conspicuous member, and though the resolution then adopted on education by Federal support did not meet his approval, in that it was not dependent on the destiny of State rights (see his article in North Am. Rev. for February 1881) yet it is easy to trace his handiwork in what was then accomplished. That such a proposition is the work of educationists is evident not only from the known aims and antecedents of its projectors, and the inherent nature of the word designed, but from the open avowal of its author, recited in Judge Tourgee's communication to the North Am. Rev. just mentioned which he properly entitled "Aaron's Rod in Politics," he candidly unfolds the designs of his party. He speaks of the plan of education by aid of the Federal Government, he says, "It strikes at the very root of the sentiment in which the doctrine of State Rights is grounded."

This plan of State aid to education presents the national government to the eyes of all the people, constantly and persistently, and in an entirely benevolent light. They will learn to regard it as the work of the "outsider" of the State, but inside of, above, and around, pervading, sustaining and vivifying the State.

Not is this all, but love and veneration for the great men whose names are the brightest heritage of Southern history, are to be displaced by the advanced ideas of the "Fool" on his "Errand" of civilization, says he in another part of the same article, "The Solid South"

BOARDERS WANTED
The undersigned solicits the patronage of those desiring a table board. Terms reasonable.
R. L. ALLEY.
Protection and Life Insurance Policy IN THE ETNA LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY.

Better than lending money at 8 per cent, with mortgaged security on property. W. P. Gurley, Esq., of Lenoir county, at the age of 47, obtained a policy of $5,000 upon the plan of paying 10 ANNUAL PREMIUMS. He has lived to complete the payments. The last amount was paid in 1881, making a total of $2,920. In January 1882, we paid a dividend of $100 to Mr. Gurley in cash. Here is where the investment feature comes in. The above statement is the practical result of a wise investment of money, conclusively proving against the uncertainty of life, and also a superior investment in a number one, first-class company, with more than twenty-seven millions of good, available assets, to make good every contract.

AGES FROM 70 TO 80 CAN BE TAKEN.
The popularity of the Etna Life Insurance Company, and the peculiar advantages of its special methods of business, indicated by its increasing business, renders its contracts particularly advantageous at this time. One of the oldest and best. Chartered in 1816, by the State of Virginia. W. H. CROW, Manager for Carolina and Virginia.

We will not weary you with statistics telling how

MESSRS. J. & P. COATS MAKE THEIR
BEST SIX-CORD SPOOL COTTON

Or how much they make daily, neither will we presume to give an opinion as to its quality. It is more important for you to find out: Whether the thread is strong and will save you time and annoyance? Whether it will run on your Sewing Machine? Whether the colors will match all the fashionable shades, and work well on silk goods?

The only possible way to arrive at the truth is to USE THE THREAD YOURSELF!
You will then know why it is called
BEST SIX-CORD SPOOL COTTON.
