Federal Interference in Elections.

A stranger to our institutions reading in a New York daily that the President of the United States had been visited by leading politicians of the Radical persuasion for the purpose of ascertaining his views and feelings in regard to the present political campaign in North Ca rolina, would very naturally suppose that the issues involved were such as affected the interests of the whole

The reader would doubtless be much surprised to learn that the people of the sovereign State of North Carolina were engaged in adjusting and discussing certain matters purely of a local or statue character, and in which the general federal, or as we must now call it, National Government had no conceen whatever.
