DISAPPOINTMENT.

What was meant by "escalation,

While I shifted my location To invite the sweet sensation Well, imagine my vexation When he gave me the translation And its Latin derivation, And a lot of information. Like a pedagogue's oration Just as if he were at school-Wasn't he an awful fool?

Kissing.

It must be rather awkward and impleasant to be observed by pry ing eyes when one indulges in little innocent osculation. We have all laughed over Dickens' account of how the fat boy Joe caught Mr Tupman in the act of kissing the spinister aunt in the arbor at Dingley Dell; and many of our readers could no doubt, if they cared, recount equally humorous episodes in their own experience, or at the expense of their friends. Apropos, here is rather a good story, which comes all the way from the antipodes. The cameraobseura at the Melbourne Exhibiton commanded a view of the streets of Melbourne, and also of the steps leading up to the dome. On the occasion in question the Exhibition was not very full of vishas, and while several persons ere looking at the camera they observed the reflex of a young gentleman and lady coming up the stair towards the dome. Their looks told how far they were entangled in the meshes of love, but they need not betrayed it quite so openly as they did. Both gazed anxiously around, no one was looking; the opportunity watoo good to be lost; and so the languishing swain clasped liis ladys love in his arms and imprinted a kiss upon her lips. The sound could not have betrayed them but they had forgotton that unfortunate camera; and amid the rather inconsiderate laughter, of those above they in hot confusion beat a hasty retreat.
