He was seven feet nine inches high, and in 1845 weighed 871 pounds. At his death, his weight was a little over 1,000 pounds. Until 1843, he was active lively and was able to labor, but from that time was obliged to stay at home or be hauled about in a two horse wagon. In 1839 his coat was buttoned around three men each of them weighing more than 200 pounds, who walked together in it across the square at Lexington. In 1850 it required thirteen and a half vards of cloth one yard wide to make him a coat. His coffin was eight feet long, thirty-five inches deep, thirty-two inches across the breast, eighteen inches across the head, and fourteen inches across the feet, and twenty-five yards of black velvet was required to cover the sides and lid. He was twice married and his children are very large, though probably none of them will ever reach half the weight of their father."-Richmond Dispatch.

What They Could do.

It is claimed that John Rockefeller could give every man, woman and child in the United States $2 each and still have left the modest sum of $1,000,000 with which to start a peanut stand. William Waldorf Astor could do the same thing, while our own dear Jay Gould could give $1.60 each and have left $7,600,000 with which to sink a well for more water. It is also stated that Mr. Jones and Mr. Brown, who work 'ten hours each day, can only give their wives $4.50 once a year, and Mr. Smith, who works from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m. upon a section on the railroad at $1.10 per day, and supports a wive and five small children, says he would be a financial wreck if he squandered a darn cent.-Buffalo
