TOBACCO CURING.

AN INTERESTING ARTICLE FROM MAJ. RAGLAND ON THIS SUBJECT.

Cure-Here's One Way-If Your Experience Differs You Better Stick to it, For Experience is Always a Safe Guide.

Medium tobacco will require from procure the services of an expert curer, if they have tobacco suitable for fine yellow. The planter saves in enhanced value of his crop many times the money paid to the curer, and besides, by close attention, he may learn in one season to cure well good, and directions, however minute will not do here, but it is practice that must qualify one to cure well.

When it is remembered that no two plants are exactly alike, no two barns precisely similiar in every particular, and that the weather may change every hour, is it reasonable that a fixed programme can be followed for every curing with any certain hope of success? The experienced know better. On work so variable, only general directions can be given. The planter here must use his head as well.

The next is called "Fixing the color," When the tobacco is suffiredden and spoil the color, unless so plain, that you cannot hope for driven off. To do this, open the off all apperance of the sweat. To dry off the sweat speedily, sprinkle dry straw or hay over the floor and set fire thereto, using just enough straw to accomplish the desired result. Right at this point more curings are spoiled than at any other stage of the process. It may be well to remember what is a fact, that at least five curings are spoiled by proceeding too fast to one failure from going too slow. Now stick a pin But to go back to the barn, where the thermometer indicates a tall of five or ten degrees-but this need not concern the curer to put him out of hope, for a little cooling under the circumstances was necessary-we close up the opening and raise the heat to one hundred degrees. But a skillful curer detects the first indications of sweat, and prevents it by regulating the heat and ventilation.

Keep the heat at one hundred degrees for four hours, and then advance two and a half degrees every two hours until one hundred and ten degrees are reached. Here you have reached the most critical point in the difficult progress of curing bright tobacco. The condition and appearance of the tobacco must now be the curer's guide. No one can successfully cure tobacco until be can dishave public schools let the parents the leaf. Too much heat reddens the and dypepsia, another finds it inleaf, first around the edge and then in spots, which are visible on both sides. Now, to prevent sponging on the one hand and spotting on the other, is the aim of the experienced curer. No definite time can be laid down to run from one hundred and ten to one hundred and twenty degrees. Sometimes four hours is suffice, then again eight hours is fast enough. While it is usual at this stage to advance about five degrees every two hours for medium tobacco, the condition of the tobacco often in- therefore it, is truth.-Rich. Medium tobacco will require from twenty-four to thirty hours steaming at about ninety degrees to yellow sufficiently; but tobacco with more or less sap, larger or smaller, will require a longer or shorter time to yellow.
