Then followed the trio, winning its meed of praise. Miss Nolia Gardner's solo with guitar accompaniment was catchy. She has a remarkable sweet voice and more than one young gallant "dreamed of her," doubtless. The quartette which tollowed was beautiful and well rendered; all the gentlemen have good voices and deserved the encore they received.

The instrumental duett by Miss Gertrude Blount and Mrs. Privett was excellent.

The next piece, N. P. Willis' pathetic story of Absalom, recited by Mr. Robert Physioc, was magnificent. This young gentleman is an actor born. The next piece, duet by Mr. Sawver and Miss Gardner, was the hit of the evening. It was splendid. Both did well. The singing was good; the acting superb. They carried the audience by storm. Their conception of the correct expressions and attitudes was perfect and as perfectly portrayed.

The quartette, "Last Night," was beautiful. The sopranos by Misses Blount and Cordon were exquisite and the full, rich, deep-toned altos by Miss Barnes and Mrs. Qualls as perfect as can be listened to.

The next piece, an instumental solo, by Miss M.F. Physioc, was a surprise. Such playing has seldom been heard here. With the powerful touch of a master hand she swept the keys and the grand strains of music leaped responsive to her will, and again, as soft as a mother's caress when soothing her child to shadowy chores of sleep, she touched the instrument and it breathed forth divine harmony, which stole over the senses, lulling to rest the weary soul and banishing every thought of care. The spontaneous applause she received was a tribute to her genius such as only a Wilson audience can-and Barnes was delightful, Their voices blended harmoniously together and the effect was magical.

Miss Lucy Whitehead's recitation was marvellous. Wilson audiences know that she possesses histrionic powers of a very high order, that she is wonderfully gifted and that training and cultivation have all united to make her very powerful and effective, but nobody was prepared for the surprise she gave them in the "Massacre of Zoroaster." She was magnificent. The selection was well adapted to display the magic of her transcendent art and she measured fully up to it. The applause which she eovked was tumultuous and would not be still intil she graciously responded She selected a very humorous dialect story, which convulsed with laughter her hearers and easily relieved the tension her previous dramatic selection had created, as well as evidenced her rare versatility.

Beautiful Piano.

Manly B. Raymos & Co., Rich nond, Va., through their salesman Mr. Cook recently brought one of their matchless Chickering Upright Pianos to Wilson. The case is of finely selected oriental mahogany and is of design only by the Chickering's. The panels are solid and finely engraved. The tone is that deep, rich, liquid quality which is a part of the Chickering Upright Pianos. The touch, while not extremely light, is very elastic and in connection with its fine repeating quality, which is found only in this make, is in connection with the beautiful tone, the realized dream of the artist. This instrument also has the sostenuto, or tone-sustaining pedal, so highly recommended by our musical criterions, and take it all in all, is probably one of the finest pianos that has ever been in Wilson.
