Houses were immediately ignited by the blazing timbers and the people who were not killed rushed in terror into the streets, where a number of them met death or were severely wounded or crushed by falling houses. Others ran in terror from the scene and hundreds went with fear, and, abandoning the city, ran into the fields, shrieking hysterically and tearing their hair with fury.

The loss of life cannot yet be stated with any degree of accuracy. It is known, however, that many persons were killed, and a very large number injured. The governor has not been seen since the explosion. It is feared that he was killed and blown out into the bay.

The town is completely paralyzed by the disaster, and no attempt was subsequently made to extinguish the fire, which was communicated to adjacent quays by flaming brands thrown by the exploding dynamite.

The number of people who have lost their senses through the explosion is great, and it is said that hundreds of people have completely gone out of their minds and will have to be confined in asylums the remainder of their lives. Mandez Nunez street is completely destroyed and a number of adjoining streets suffered terribly and are in ruins.
