LIVING FAITH.

O for a faith that knows no doubt, That ne'er can weakly fall; That stands unmoved 'mid fiercest winds...

THE OLD MAN'S STORY.

"Tell us, old man, the reason why you never married." The speaker was one of a group of grey looking young men...

But a short distance from my home lived Nelly Youth, the youngest and only surviving daughter of two aged parents...

To that lovely but lovely home was I often fond of going in the days of my boyhood...

But the pleasant association between Nelly and myself was broken, and we parted, never to meet again.

But the pleasant association between Nelly and myself was broken, and we parted, never to meet again.

To say how unqualified I was for the temptations of business life would be to say that I was entirely unacquainted with any of its fascinations and sinful pleasures.

"Listen, and I'll tell you all about it." "We were taking a trip across the plains, and coming upon the camp fire of an old hunter..."

"Jack Marsden—a and a better fellow never lived—had built himself a cabin in a snug place on the bank of a river, away out from everybody."

"It was on Christmas Day that about half a dozen of us being in his neighborhood, we made up our minds to pay Jack a visit."

"I was Jack Marsden, and he was as dead as a stone. He was hacked terrible, and his scalp was gone."

"The deed had been done that morning, for we could see that Jack had been dead but a few hours at most."

"I walked softly around the house, but every thing looked desolate and forsaken. At length I turned my steps to the garden, which adjoined the yard, and entered the gate."

"Come, boys, let us follow him," I said. "He's after his gal, and he will lead us to her."

"The boys answered never a word, but they came on after me as I hurried towards the ghost."

"We crept close up, and then with a spring and a rush, we bounded upon them. Not one of our blows went amiss, and each of the savages went down in his tracks."

TUE LIGHT BRIGADE.

A GRAPHIC DESCRIPTION OF THE CHARGE BY A SURVIVOR.

A survivor of the celebrated ride into the jaws of death gives in the Boston Commercial Bulletin the following graphic picture of the charge:

"Lord Cardigan's eye glauced us ever; then spurring his horse forward a few paces he said: 'My men we have received orders to silence that battery.'"

"We went in at a trot; the trot changed to a canter, and the canter to a gallop. Through the lines I could see Lord Cardigan several horse lengths ahead."

"The Ravelin fell before our sabres at the corn falls before the traper. They seemed to have no power of resistance."

"I walked softly around the house, but every thing looked desolate and forsaken. At length I turned my steps to the garden, which adjoined the yard, and entered the gate."

But the pleasant association between Nelly and myself was broken, and we parted, never to meet again.
