BEECHER ONTHE SOUTH.

We publish elsewhere in this issue an extract from Mr. Beecher's lecture after his return from a tour through the South. He says the South has borne and that reducing its people from wealth position and influence to poverty, and insignificance was enough to turn the dispositions of the Southern people; and that while he was among the first to condemn slavery, after its abolition he wanted peace and love, and communion. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness; the bowels in general are costive, sometimes alternative with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight, dry cough is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility; he is easily startled, his feet are cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to try it.
