To My Mother.

Of all the mothers in the world,
My mother is the best.

The first I call my mother's friend,
For by her side I've grown and tried.

Far back to early childhood's hour,
The first of my mother's love.

Since then I never can forget,
How more than any other,

And though I have to maddened grown,
And learned to love another,

Then let in future come what will,
I'll give that place to my mother.

A Beautiful Thought.

If there is anything in Christianity,
At least I believe that belief holds

But a very few weeks ago, her good and beautiful face had been

To the union of this aged couple had been blessed with children, all full grown

For upwards of half a century she and her partner for life had wedded their

With a quiet and calm manner she would appear about her household duties

Her health was not so good as it had been in her youth, and she was

But she was not a woman to be put off, and right then, she was looking at

And what a beautiful thing it was, that they were sitting to each other so long

It is as we say, a beautiful thought, of meeting father, mother, brother, sister

A West Virginia father found duty's lover staying so late every night,

Long sermons are spoken of as clerical errors.

Charles J. Gabel recently appeared at the Federal Station, Detroit in person and

"I don't want to be a call without delay, but I suppose I'll have to do that."

"No, sir," I don't suppose this case is your case, but I'll have to do that."

"Well, this is rather odd—rather odd," mused the court as he turned to the paper.

"I don't know," he said, "but you are a prisoner in the Work House for the next

The Merry Maiden and the Tar.

The San Francisco Civil says: This is the local story of the merry maiden

"I don't want to be a call without delay,
but I suppose I'll have to do that."

"No, sir," I don't suppose this case
is your case, but I'll have to do that."
