GOOD-BYE.

All over at last. Good type, sweet dreams, Widely apart our paths must lie— You must not see me tremble or start, I amost hide this terrible ache at my heart And hid you a careless, light good bye.

Ah, well—why not? We are only friends. You would never think to take it smiss; But what would you do were my heart um If you knew I had given my heart unasked. Thank heaven, you'll never dream of this.

You little knew of my sweet, sweet dreams.
That my fisalish heart was all your own;
Well the blame is mine? Could I blame you, dear
That your soul is grander than ones are.
That your voice has a tenderer tone? Good-bye, dear eyes, that have bounted me so? Fond lips whose kisses were never for me! Good-bye! May your ways with joy be rife. Twill be always as now — I shall love you. Pray for you, all the days of my life.

He is we'l known as a man of sound judgment, high standing, and of the most practical ideas, and is far from being a believer in any of the popular "isms" of the day, especially spiritualism. Late on the night of Friday. December 28, he was awakened from a sound sleep at his house in Micanopy by so strong a feeling that there was some mysterious presence in his room that he got up and ighted a lamp and looked all over the house, but finding nothing unusual, he returned to bed and apparently fell into a light sleep in which there appeared to him a vision of his wife's brother, R. M. Stribling, in a deadly conflict, in which he had his throat cut in a most horrible manner, and was removed to a store near by, where Robert Lincoln-Was never two great he was placed on a counter, and after the apparent lapse of time he died from the effects of the wound The vision was so real that Dr. Bruce could sleep no more, and when morning dawned he went out, but could not rid himself of the very strong impression it had made upon him. He related the dream, as he called it, to several of his friends, and later in the day visited a wellknown spiritualist in Gainesville, who told him that some aw'ul calamity must have befallen young Stribling. And sure enough the next mail from Virginia brought Dr. Brace a letter announcing the death of his brother-in-law in the exact manner he had seen and at the very hour that it had of the murdered man, visiting relatives in Kentucky at the time of his death, bad a similar dream, and while relating it at the breakfast table was hand a dispatch an-
