A LEGACY.

BY JOHN G. WHITTIER.

Friend of my many years!
When the great silence falls at last on me,
Let me not leave to pain and sudden tears
A memory of hers.

But pleasant thoughts alone
Of one who was thy friendship's honored guest
And drank the wine of cheer in unison
From some wide trencher's own.

I leave with thee a sense
Of hands upheld and trials rendered less—
The comfort joy which is to helpfulness
Its own great recompense.

The knee bent that from thine,
As from the garments of the Master, stole
Calmness and strength, the virtue which makes whole
And heals without a sign.

Yes, more, the assurance strong
That love which fills to perfect utterance here,
Lives on to fill the heavenly atmosphere
With its immortal song.

ABOUT LOVERS.

Very short engagements do not give a girl a chance to find out much about a young man before marriage. Nowadays matrimony often follows so close upon the heels of "an offer," that it is no wonder our young people have a deal of sad thinking to do afterward. There are a thousand little things in daily intercourse of any duration which are constantly solving themselves into tests of character; slight they may be, but very significant. Some forlorn old lady must have an escort home of a cold evening; she walks slow, and tells the same story many times; see how your lover comports himself under this. He is asked to read aloud to the home circle some book which he has already perused in private, or some one in which he is not at all interested; watch him then. Notice also, if he invariably takes the most comfortable chair in the room, never thinking to offer it to a person who may enter till he or she is already seated. Invite him to carve for you at the table. Give him a letter to drop in the post office, and find out if it ever leaves that grave his pocket. Open and read his favorite newspaper before he gets a chance to do so. Mislay his cigar case. Lose his cane. Sit accidently on his new beaver. Praise another man's cravat. Differ with him in a favorite opinion. Put a spoonful of gravy on his meat instead of his potato. Ah, you may laugh! But just try him in these ways, and see how he will wear, for it is not the great things of this life over which we mortals stumble. A rock we walk around, a mountain we cross; it is the unobserved, unexpected, unlooked for little sticks and pebbles which cause us to halt on life's journey.

SYMPATHY.

I think the hardest thing for human nature to bear is lack of sympathy. One can endure privation, poverty, disappointment, trial, in almost any form, if there is only one loyal human being to whom we can turn our tearful eyes, and say: Isn't this hard?

Nor need there be a verbal reply. The slight pressure, a quick responsive moistening of the eye, an arm slid around the waist, an echoing sigh, a touch of the lips to the throbbing forehead. What heaven is in these mute tokens! How they bridge over the yawning gulf of despair! How fair, when the tempest lulls, do they span it with hope's rainbow! True, the clouds may return—the chill mist—the darkness; but the bright, warm tints have been there! More than angelic are these soul responses. Eternity shall show it, when they over whom the shadows of great trouble fell, till wrong almost seemed right, shall, with these their earth-saviours, serenely untangle the life web, every fibre of which is spun by the hand of Infinite Love.

A kind word! Don't grade it. Don't say, "It is a sad pity, but then it is no concern of mine." A kind look even. Don't withhold it. I remember once, when in great trouble, I was walking the crowded thoroughfare on some errand, in that state of utter hopelessness which must have told its story on my face, suddenly encountering a look from a stranger so full of compassionate tenderness that I who had thought never again to shed a tear, so stony seemed my eyes, felt them overflowing. Oh, the hope and courage that look gave me! Some day I shall know more about it—not here.

There are those heaven-ordained ones who shed this brightness as they glide past us; and there are others so flinty, yet so polished withal, that we clasp our hands tightly over our heart to still its cries, whispering, Hush!—not there—anywhere but there! And as they pass us a chill, like that from a newly opened tomb creeps slowly over us, and the last flower of hope droops to the earth beneath it.

I suppose such people have their place in the world; but they always seem to be like those artificial plants suspended in the pots from drawing room windows, pernial stiffnesses, mocking our reach, incapable of growth or expansion, without moisture, without fragrance, impervious alike to dew or sunshine—fit only to accumulate the grime and dust of years.

The best always the cheapest—Save money by purchasing the celebrated Bay State and Zeigler Brothers shoes—bought direct from the manufacturers. For sale by P. N. STAINBACK & Co.

CARRYING A LUCKY PIECE.

HOW THE CUSTOM IS MAINTAINED BY ALL CLASSES.

Two ladies met on Woodward avenue. As they stopped to speak one of them dropped her pocketbook and the money in it rolled out on the sidewalk.

"Too bad," said the other, as she assisted her friend to restore the contents, "it's such bad luck to drop money unless it belongs to some one else."

"I don't mind," answered the owner of the pocketbook, "because, you see, I carry a lucky piece."

This habit of carrying a piece of money for luck has become something more than a superstition, since it is a practice common among all classes.

"I wouldn't take $100 for that sixpence," said a staid business man recently. "I found it in my mother's purse when she died and I have always kept it as a souvenir."

He did not say that it brought him luck or that he had any superstition connected with it, but he unconsciously valued it as a charm. There is a piece of bone that is taken from a fish, called a sheep's head, which shows plainly the imprint of the letter "L." Theatrical people value this very highly as a lucky piece.

It is impossible to find a pocketbook that does not have some trifling charm in it to bring luck to its owner. It may be a coin, a stone, a chicken's wishbone, a first tooth or a smooth sixpence, but it is expected to accomplish some or all of these missions. Keep off disease; avert the evil eye; protect the person carrying it from bodily harm; bring prosperity in business, love, courtship and marriage; thwart the evil designs of enemies, insure a safe journey and perform many other apparent miracles.

DAUGHTERS OF EVE.

The empress of Austria is advised to spend the winter in Egypt on account of rheumatic troubles.

Scarpia and Justinian are the names of Sarah Bernhardt's two lions, which she lets loose occasionally. One of Sarah's friends always brings his revolver with him when he calls.

Two New Orleans young ladies who find it necessary to work for a living have opened a dairy and sell milk. They have a little cart, and every morning may be seen driving behind their bright tin cans and pails.

The preparation of the trousseau of the future empress of China is under full headway, although the wedding will not be until 1889. Thousands of hands are now busy, and it will be the greatest trousseau ever made. The hats are particularly numerous.

Sarah Bernhardt proposes to be the greatest mother-in-law on record. "I shall put into the part all my heart, all my art," says she. Her presents to the daughter-in-law began with a diamond necklace for 60,000 francs and ran all the way down to a fur boa.

Jenny Lind was rather sensitive on the subject of her rivals. She attended, on one occasion, a garden party given by Lady Burdett-Coutts. In the course of conversation a gentleman, speaking of Christine Nilsson, called her the "Swedish Nightingale." Instantly there sprung up from a seat close by an aged, thin woman, who pointed her finger at the speaker and exclaimed, in a voice quivering with rage, "You are wrong, sir, grossly wrong; I am the 'Swedish Nightingale.' I am Jenny Lind!"

WHAT HE DISCOVERED.

A handsomely dressed young woman entered a crowded street car. A long whiskered old fellow, wearing a dingy slouch hat and a suit of homespun clothes, got up and said:

"Miss, take my seat. I don't look as well as these here gentlemen"—nodding at several men—"but I've diskivered that I've got more politeness."

The young woman sat down without even thanking the old fellow, and slyly winking at a woman whom she knew, whispered:

"How do you like my gallant country hoosier? Don't you think he would cut quite a figure in a dime museum?"

"Mebbe," said the old fellow with a smile that clearly bespoke his ignorance of the unladylike ridicule, "I believe I left my pocket book thar on the seat. Will you please get up a minit?"

The young woman got up. The old fellow sat down, and stroking his whiskers, remarked:

"Blieve I'll keep on setting here, Miss. I stood up so much at the dime museum just now that I'm sutter tired. I've got a little more politeness than these gentlemen but I've diskivered that I ain't got so much sense."

TEA TABLE TALK.

A bronze ink, that looks as if it had been sanded, is one of the latest things on paper.

The admiral's hat did not have a long run because it made the average woman look like a guy.

Prayer books bound in colors to correspond with the ecclesiastical seasons are exhibited.

Bangles would appear to have become the craze again, and finest silver threads the favorite.

Bookmarkers with slips of paper for comments on what is read are a new Boston wrinkle.

Fur top shoes are seen on the feet these days of some of the extravagant women of Vanity Fair.

Solid silver paper knives in the form of a Damascus sword have crept in among wedding presents.

The cold water treatment for a beautiful complexion is said to be gaining more converts every day.

Not many women have the courage to have their "picture taken" in toboggan dress by aerial photographers.

Already those who are popularly supposed to know everything are saying more people will go to Europe next summer than ever before.

Reputed swells "just from the other side," have introduced a high hat wholly different from the stovepipe now the fashion in America.

Parisian dandies have tired of the gold knobbed canes, crutch canes and canes with ducks' beaks that have been the rage and are carrying a thick stick with the claw of a crawfish for a handle.

The women of Paris have adopted for the winter season a waggle in their walk. The art of waggling gracefully in furs is being taught at the best dancing schools. The correct waggle is described as a short step and an undulating sweep of the hips. It is said to be much more graceful than the manish stride that prevailed during the summer.

AN UNFORTUNATE FARMER.

"I s'pose you fellers ain't got no paper you want me to sign an' beat me out o' some money?" said a Dakota farmer near whose house we camped one night.

"No," I replied.

"I told the old woman you didn't look hardly sharp enough to be in that style o' biz'ness," replied the observing agriculturist.

"Have you been troubled much by those kind of sharpers?" I asked.

"Well, I 'pear to be doin' my share o' 'sportin' them. There's a chiurn over in the corner that cost me $60—they got me to order a dozen of 'em when I thought I was signin' a 'greement to tell the neighbors what a good churn they was. I got a $100 hay rake out to the barn on the same plan. Then I had to pay for eight lightnin' rods on my house, when I thought I only signed for one. 'Nother man et dinner here gave me a quarter for it, an' I signed a receipt that turned out to be a check for $30 on my bank account. 'Nother good-lookin' feller said he was collectin' autergraphs o' prom'nent men, and I shoved mine onto a blank piece o' paper, which he went an' filled out as a bill o' sale for my best hoss, and led the critter off."

"Then I made a three hoss swiney that I thought up all myself one night, an' 'bout a month after had to give a feller $16 'cause he said he got a patent on it ten years ago. I got a drive well in the back yard that I have been paying $25 on 'bout twice a year. There are two notes at the bank for me to pay now that I signed when I slapped my name onto some recommendations of a mowin machine an' which the feller cut in two and made notes of. Then yesterday another cuss come long with a petition to the Legislatur' ag'in high taxes, and I socked my name onto it, an' now I'm waitin' to see whether it'll turn out a mortgage on the farm or only a common note. I'm mighty glad you fellers ain't got no scheme 'cause I'd be sure to go into it.

FOURTEEN MISTAKES.

From Wives and Daughters.

Here, then, are fourteen great mistakes. It is a great mistake to set up our own standard of right and wrong, and judge people accordingly; to measure the enjoyment of other by our own; to expect uniformity of opinion in this world; to look for judgment and experience in youth; to endeavor to mould all dispositions alike; not to yield to immaterial trifles; to look for perfection in our own actions; to worry ourselves and others with what cannot be remedied; not to alleviate all that needs alleviation as far as lies in our power, not to make allowances for the infirmities of others; to consider everything impossible that we cannot perform, to believe only what our finite minds can grasp, to expect to be able to understand everything. The greatest of mistakes is to live for time alone when any moment may launch us into eternity.

NEWSPAPER TRIALS.

REV. T. DEWITT TALMAGE.

One of the great trials of the newspaper profession is that its members are compelled to see more of the sham of the world than any other profession. Through every newspaper office, day after day, go all the weaknesses of the world—all the vanities that want to be puffed, all the revenges that want to be reaped, all the mistakes that want to be corrected, all the dull speakers that want to be thought eloquent, all the meanness that wants to get its wares noticed gratis in the editorial column in order to save the tax of the advertising column, all the men who want to be set right who were never right, all the cracked-brained philosophers with stories as long as their hair and as gloomy as their finger nails in mourning because benefit of soap—all the liars who come to stay five minutes, but talk five hours. Through the editorial and reportorial rooms all the follies and shams of the world are seen, day after day, and the temptation is to believe there is either in God, man nor woman. It is no surprise to me that in this profession there are some skeptical men. I only wonder that newspaper men believe anything.

MARRIAGES IN MEXICO.

In Mexico everybody marries, whether young or old, rich or poor, handsome or ugly; whether their marriage portion consists of good fincas (houses or other real estate, ready talegas (a talega is $1,000), or of only centos pieces of eyes. This last phrase, which is another proverbial saying, is a puzzling one to translate. "Four legs in the air," is the literal rendering of it. I suppose it means people who bring to each other in wedlock no dower save their persons, which, indeed, is the most usual one in this country. The reckless Mexicans, like too many of the people north of the Rio Grande, rush into matrimony without the slightest care for the future or the beggars they may bring into the world. If any sober friend, who has observed the ways of life, should suggest to an ardent young couple how necessary some little property is to keep the devil out of the house, the enamorados (lovers) will only laugh and answer "Dios no desamparara." (God will help us), which simply means, in other words: "We are both young and brimful of passion, we like each other exceedingly, and we will do our will, come what may." In such cases the Deity is seldom thought of.

WHAT WIVES ARE FOR.

It is not to sweep the house and make the beds, and darn the socks and cook the meat, chiefly that a man wants a wife. If this is all he wants, hired servants can do that cheaper than a wife. If this is all, when a young man calls to see a young lady, send him into the pantry to taste the bread and cakes that she has made, or send him to see the needlework and bed making, or put a broom in her hands and send him to witness its use. Such things are important, and the wise young man will quickly look after them. But what the true man most wants of a wife is her companionship, sympathy and love. The way of life has many weary places in it, and man needs a companion with him. A man is sometimes overtaken with misfortune; he meets a failure and defeat; trials and temptations beset him, and he needs one to stand by and sympathize. He has some stern battles to fight with poverty, with enemies, and with sin, and he needs a woman who, as he puts an arm around her, feels that he has something to fight for and will help him to fight it, who will put her lips to his ear and whisper words of counsel, and her hand to his heart and impart new inspiration.
