A REMARKABLE INSTITUTION. The Precautions Against Burglary in the

"The bank of France is a remarkable institution in many ways," said a broker of New York. "But in no way is it more remarkable than in the manner in which it guards the vaults in which its great stores of gold and silver are kept. The bank of France generally carries more gold and always more silwer than any institution in the world, with the solitary exception of the United States treasury. But even the latter does not take such precautions to prevent thieves from breaking in and stealing. We confide in bolts and bars, but while the bank of France has a complete system of these, it does not deem them sufficient, and adopts a very peculiar means for insuring the security of its treasures. Every day when the money is placed in the vaults in the cellar a lot of masons are on hand and wall up the doors with hydraulic mortar. Water is then turned on and kept running until the cellar is flooded. Thus a burglar would have to provide himself with a diving suit and break down a cement wall before he could begin work on the vaults. When the officers arrive in the morning the water is drawn off, the masonry broken down and the vaults opened. It is difficult to imagine how the most expert burglar would penetrate all these defenses, and certainly the treasures of the bank of France are better guarded than any in the world."

MILK WAS SCARCE.

A Chicagonu's Laughable Experience in the Desert.

Chancellor L. Jenks, the millionaire real estate man, says the Chicago Herald, has large interests in southern California and makes frequent trips to and from the golden state. The last time he went out he took the Southern Pacific railway. One morning the train stopped for breakfast at a station in the middle of the desert. The depot was the only building to be seen, and the restaurant was next door to the ticket office. The floorwalker in charge of the arrangements was what the Browning club people call a "dead tough mug." He was in his shirt sleeves and tobacco juice was sprinkled liberally over his front. Mr. Jenks, who is no longer young, was suffering from the heat and hadn't much appetite, and when the girl came to take his order he said he guessed he wouldn't have anything but a glass of milk. The girl opened her eyes wide and, beckoning to the floorwalker, said in audible under-

"Say, Jim, his whiskers wants a glass of iced milk.'

"Iced milk!" he roared, "iced milk! Good Lord, cully, we haul our water from El Paso. Do you think we pick cows off the cactus plants? Give him a cup of coffee."

IN RUSSIA.

A Land Where People Must Be Careful in Their Speech.

Two merchants while in Moscow during the ezar's late visit to that city, were rather noisily discussing the merits and demerits of a friend with whom they had spent the evening. The hour was late and both had indulged a little too freely in champagne, consequently their talk was not as guarded

Finally one of them said: "There is no use talking about him; he is a fool." A policeman, whom they had not observed, on hearing this placed both men under arrest, refusing to give any explanation. On reaching the police station they were charged with insulting his imperial majesty, Alexander III. The merchants replied that they had not been speaking of the czar at all, but an acquaintance.

"Well," said the officer, assuming an air of great authority; "wef all know who is called a fool." Russia is a dangerous country to call a person a fool, but it will be still more dangerous to do so when the ezarowitz ascends the

A Fighting Schoolma'am.

A big tramp made a big mistake the other day at Wiscassett, says a Maine exchange. He entered a schoolhouse there where a little miss of the genuine Yankee stamp presided. There was a moment of alarm, for the schoolhouse was upon a back hillside far from neighbors. The tramp approached the teacher's desk, evidently liking the looks of her watch. The spunky little schoolma'am came at him like a hornet and buzzed around him with her whip, dealing viciously stinging strokes with the weapon. The tramp made a few vain efforts to advance or to eatch his nimble antagonist; then, blinded and maddened by the flying whip, he turned and streaked it out of doors and down the hill. He stood afar off and shouted ugly epithets at his vanquisher, but kept away from the whip.

A Brakeman's Perilous Nap.

Near a country railroad station the other day a Utica Observer man saw a sight, to him, at least, unusual. On the pilot of a rapidly-moving locomotive which was drawing a long train of coal "jimmies" lay a man, evidently a train hand, in the negligent attitude of careless slumber. The couch was hard and jolted fearfully, the hot sun poured down its sharp and almost vertical rays with scorehing heat, the roar and rattle of the train were deafening, and yet the tired brakeman slept as peacefully through it all as if the laboring monster were only crooning the gentlest lullaby and swaying his couch as tenderly as a doting mother the cradle of her sleeping infant.

Money he Good.

A story of the trying times of the war of 1812 comes from an old Bath (Me.) sailmaker. Money was an unknown commodity along the Maine coast and barter the invariable rule. By and by, when the skies began to brighten, a skipper offered to pay in cash for a lot of fish purchased of a Paippsburg party. It was a great novelty, and the fisher-nan shook his head dubiously, exclaim-ing: "No, you can't have them. I must have ruin—rum and molasses—or you can't have the fish!"

The Surest Remedy

For indigestion, costiveness, and sick-headache is Ayer's Pills. The harsh, drastic purgatives, once deemed indispensable to a "thorough cleaning out" of the system, have given place to milder and more skilfully-prepared laxatives. Foremost among these are Ayer's Pills. Being composed of the essential principles of the most effective cathartics, without calomel or any other injurious drug, no ill effects ever follow their use. For this reason, these Pills are everywhere recommended as the best family medicine. Their sugar-coating makes them easy to take, and preserves their medicinal strength in any climate and for an indefinite length of time.

"I was a sufferer, for years, from chronic dyspepsia and liver troubles, and found in permanent relief until I commenced taking Ayer's Pills. They have effected a complete cure."—G. W. Mooney, Walla Walla, W. T.

"I was a sufferer, for years, from chronic discussion of the advice of a friend, I began the use of Ayer's Pills as a remedy for billiousness, constitution, high fevers, and colds. They served me better than anything I had previously tried, and I have used them in attacks of that sort ever since."—H. W.

"For years I have been subject to consti-vide a good supply of Ayer's Pills, for the use of both officers and men. They are a safe and reliable cathartic, and always give our remedies, I have become convinced that satisfaction."-H. Robinson, 22 E. Pearl st., Ayer's Pills are the best.
