Associate Justice Davis, of N. C. Supreme Court, Says:

Dear Miss Tillinghast:—Yours of the 12th is received, and I cheerfully answer by saying that I have been much benefited by the use of the Electropoise. I suffered from a severe and long-continued attack of the Grippe, followed by Rheumatism in the neck and shoulders. I commenced the use of the Electropoise in October last, and my rheumatic pains ceased immediately, and I think my health and feelings have been much improved by its use. Very truly yours,
(Signed) Jos. J. DAVIS.

UNCLE SAM'S BIG GUNS.

Facts About Their Caliber, Weight and Range.

American Ships of War Armed with Huge Cannon Which Fire a Projectile Weighing One Thousand Pounds Ten Miles.

The following facts concerning the power and capabilities of some of the main and secondary battery guns carried aboard war ships of the United States readers may find of interest: The main battery guns have for a maximum caliber at present thirteen inches. These guns are sixty-seven-ton breech-loading rifles. The minimum caliber now allowed in the main batteries of high-powered ordnance guns is the four-inch rapid-fire piece. The various calibers include the thirteen-inch, twelve-inch, ten-inch, eight-inch, six-inch, five-inch and four-inch. The secondary batteries include the six-pounder, three-pounder and one-pounder rapid-fire guns, the forty-seven-millimeter and thirty-seven-millimeter revolving cannon and the Gatling gun. Recently, however, the navy department has confined the guns of the secondary battery to the six-pounder and long one-pounder rapid-fire pieces, the thirty-seven-millimeter revolving cannon and the Gatling gun.

The majority of main-battery guns in service to-day are of the six-inch caliber. The building up of the ordnance of the United States navy may be said to have begun with the six-inch guns. Just now, however, there appears to be a tendency to make the four-inch guns preponderate in numbers, the Dashiell rapid-fire breech mechanism making this caliber gun an ideal weapon for the smaller class of unarmored ships.

No guns of the thirteen-inch caliber have as yet been fabricated. This type of gun will not be demanded until the new battleships Indiana, Massachusetts and Oregon, now building, are ready for service. Each of these battle ships will have four thirteen-inch guns. In limiting the main-battery guns to the thirteen-inch caliber, the navy department has adopted the plan now in vogue in the British navy. Until recently the British admiralty was ordering sixteen-inch 110-ton guns. The maximum caliber gun now building for use in the British navy is the 13.5-inch 67-ton gun. A few 110-ton guns are afloat to-day aboard British warships, but when the life of these pieces is exhausted they will in all probability be replaced by 67-ton guns.

The heaviest caliber guns so far completed for the United States navy are the twelve-inch weapons, of which two are finished. They are both designed for service aboard the coast-defense battle ship Monterey. The twelve-inch guns weigh about fifty-one tons, fire a projectile weighing one thousand pounds to a distance of about ten miles, the powder charge weighing five hundred pounds. The twelve-inch projectile should be able to pierce eighteen inches of steel armor at point-blank range. The twelve-inch gun is worked either by hydraulic or pneumatic power, all the elevating, training and loading being under the control of levers.

The United States navy has to date four ten-inch guns mounted aboard ship. They are carried by the double-turreted monitor Miantonomoh, two ten-inch guns being in each of her turrets. This gun has a weight of about thirty tons. The projectile fired weighs about five hundred pounds and is propelled by a powder charge weighing about two hundred and thirty pounds. The estimated range is about eight miles.

The eight-inch gun is in service aboard five warships of the navy and will be placed aboard a number of the new warships as the vessels put in their appearance. This gun fires a shot weighing about two hundred and ten pounds, with a powder charge of about ninety pounds. The range is about seven miles.

The six-inch gun weighs very close to five tons. The projectile weighs one hundred pounds and the powder charge about forty-five pounds. The range is close to five miles.

The five-inch gun weighs about forty hundred weight, and the four-inch gun about twenty-six hundred-weight. The projectile of the latter weighs thirty-three pounds, and the range is over three miles.

Worshipping Bottles in Burmah.

A good story is told by the Modern Church. An eminent lady missionary in Burmah recently gave Dr. A. J. Gordon an instructive but somewhat startling chapter from her experience. In one of her tours she said she came upon a village where cholera was raging. Having with her a quantity of a famous pain-killer she went from house to house administering the remedy to the invalids and left a number of bottles to be used after she had gone. Returning to the village some months later the missionary was met by the head man of the community, who cheered and delighted her by this intelligence: "Teacher, we have come over to your side; the medicine did us so much good that we have accepted your God." Overjoyed at this news she was conducted to the house of her informant, who, opening a room, showed her the pain-killer bottles, solemnly arranged in a row upon the shelf, and before them the whole company immediately prostrated themselves in worship.

A Handy Way to Send Money.

There is one detail in connection with the German post office that forces itself on the admiration of the foreigners. If you desire to send money, you hand in the sum at the post office, with a post-card costing five cents, which you address to your correspondent with details of the sum sent, and receive a receipt in exchange. But you need write no letter, send no postal order or receipt, nor trouble your correspondent to go to the post office; the postman delivers to your correspondent at his house or office your postcard, and in return for half of it hands him at once in cash the sum of money sent.

St. Vitus Dance Cured. VIII. SAN ANTONIO, Cal. Co., Cal., Feb. 1890. My boy, 13 years old, was so affected by St. Vitus Dance that he could not go to school for 4 years. Two bottles of Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic restored his health, and he is now attending school again.
MICHAEL O'CONNELL.

A Very Bad Case. EAST NEWMARKET, Md., March 8, 1891. My daughter had epilepsy so severe that she could have 6 or 7 fits every 24 hours. Immediately after using Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic the spasms decreased in number, and in less than two weeks from taking the first dose they entirely ceased. Before using this medicine her mind was very weak, but now mind and memory are fully restored, and she is entirely cured of the fits by the use of this great remedy.
