After the Grip

And after typhoid fever, diphtheria, pneumonia, or other prostrating diseases, Hood's Sarsaparilla is just what is needed to restore the strength and vigor so much desired, and to expel all poison from the blood. It has had wonderful success in many such cases.

Hood's Pills act especially upon the liver, driving it from torpidity to its natural duties, cure constipation and assist digestion.

Little Girl's Experience in a Light-house.

Mr. and Mrs. Loren Trescott are keepers of the Gov. Lighthouse at Sandhach, Mich., and are blessed with a daughter, four years old. Last April she was taken down with Measles, followed by a dreadful Cough and turning into fever. Doctors at home and in the city treated her, but in vain, she grew worse rapidly, until she was a mere rattle of bones. Then she tried Dr. Acker's New Discovery and after the use of half bottles, was completely cured. Only Dr. King's New Discovery is got weight in gold, yet you may get a bottle free at W. M. Cohen's drugstore.

THE "BAD MAN."

He Was Brave When His Opponent Was Unarmed.

He was a good man to keep away from; practically everyone admitted that. He was a bad man to have any trouble with; all seemed agreed on that—at least all except the quiet little stranger.

The stranger had heard all the accounts of the man's deeds; of his wonderful marksmanship; and finally he met the "bad man" himself.

"I was jest tellin' the stranger, Bill," said one of the bystanders, "of the time when you made that young eastern feller stand on a table, and then shot some of his toes off."

"Yes," returned Bill, "the kid was too sassy, an' I jest wanted to show 'im that I was a bad man to fool with."

"That was a pretty good shot, too," commented another of Bill's admirers, "when you stopped your pony in the street, made Big-Foot Jake back up agin a wall, and then let him have it in the shoulder, losin' his arm for 'im."

"Fair," admitted Bill. "Jake was gettin' a bit too fresh, an' I had to call him down so's he'd remember it."

He looked at the quiet, little stranger, but the latter did not seem to be sufficiently impressed. The "bad man" glowered at him for a moment, and the bystanders thought he was beginning to look wicked.

"But that ain't my best shootin', stranger," he said. "A fresh tender-foot gave me some guff once, an' I told him to throw up his hands. He did and I turned loose once with this here Colt's, an' put a bullet through the palm of his right hand at twenty yards."

"That was a pretty good off-hand revolver shot," said the stranger, apparently waking up a little.

"Well, it was some good," said the "bad man."

"Could you have done it if the other man had been armed?"

"Look here, young feller—" The quiet little stranger had one hand in the pocket of his coat as he went on:

"No, sir; you couldn't have hit the side of a house if you'd thought the other man had a gun, and you'd have been afraid to try. I have one."

The "bad man" backed off, keeping his eye on the pocket that the quiet little man had his hand in. The "bad man" said he would see him some other time, and by rare good luck the quiet little stranger got out of town without being shot at from an alleyway. The "bad man" was like most other "bad men."—Chicago Tribune.

A Horse in a Hay Mow.

A horse belonging to C. J. West, a baker of Hackettstown, N. J., got into the hay mow the other day and Mr. West had an awful time hunting. Of course, he looked everywhere in the neighborhood except his own mow, and when he finally found him he didn't know what to do about it. He thought first of taking off the roof of the barn and raising him out with a derrick, and then of building an elevator, but neither of these plans seemed feasible, and he went out and pressed Aaron Marlett into his service. Aaron took a view of the surroundings and led the horse to the head of the stairs. Placing his back against the side of the barn and his feet against the haunches of the horse, he gave a sudden shove. There was a great clatter, and in a very few seconds the horse found himself down stairs without knowing exactly how he got there.—Chicago Post.

Charity and Fashion.

"I suppose you still pursue your charities and visit the poor?" said her uncle. "Oh, dear, no!" was the answer "Slumming isn't considered good form now, you know."—Washington Star.

—The lord mayor of London, who had been in communication with the prince of Wales as to the disposition of the wedding gifts from the corporation intended for the Princess Mary of Teck, is said, "on the best authority," to have received an intimation that it will be best to do nothing in the matter at present; and the rather practical explanation is given that the engagement of Prince George to an English princess will shortly be announced.

—What becomes of the tail of a tadpole when the animal becomes a frog? Prof. Bickmore explains that the gradual formation of the legs is accompanied by a corresponding decrease in the size of the tail, and when the legs are sufficiently grown to enable the young frog to climb out of the water the tail has been absorbed into the rest of the body.

—Elder Brother (who has to do the work for the family)—"Ed, did I hear you say the other day that you wished you knew how to milk a cow?" Younger Brother—"Yes." Elder Brother (benignly)—"Well, if you will black my shoes for me I will let you milk the cow to-night." The arrangement was made and performed.—Buffalo Courier.
