HIS IRON NERVE.

The Way He Died Proved Him to be a Lawyer.

He sat just opposite me in the train, and from the legal documents he was perusing I had no doubt that he was a lawyer. I looked out of the window as the whistle blew to note that we were approaching a large town, and a minute later felt that the car was off the rails. A half-open switch had done the business. We bobbed and bumped along for a few yards, and then the car tilted over and went down an embankment.

We were all pulled out of the wreck after a bit, and I found I had a broken leg and some lesser evils. I was laid on the grass beside the lawyer, who was for a time unconscious, but presently he came to and briskly observed: "Open switch—train derailed—culpable carelessness—won't settle for a cent under five thousand dollars!"

He seemed to feel of himself for two or three minutes to find out how badly he was hurt, and then continued:

"Worse than I thought for! It appears that both legs and this left arm are broken, and I think I can also plead internal injuries. I'm good for six months in the hospital, even if I pull through. Damages not one cent less than ten thousand dollars, and don't be in a hurry to settle at that figure!"

There were people rushing about, still engaged in the work of rescue, and three or four of us were groaning and taking on close by, but the lawyer was in no wise rattled. He was evidently sinking, however, for his voice was much weaker as he said:

"Papers, cards and envelopes on the body to identify it by, and they'll telegraph my wife and ship mangled remains home by express. Hurt worse than I thought for. Quite sure I'm going to die. Will draw and everything in order, and left note on my office desk for my wife to sue for twenty thousand dollars in case of my death. Clear case, and jury won't be out five minutes."

If he said any more I didn't catch it. I was just then busy figuring up my own damages and groaning away in four languages. By and by the people came with doors and shutters to carry us up to the depot. As two of them were ready to pick me up, I said: "I think the lawyer here is hurt a good deal worse than I am, and you may give him the preference."

"O, he isn't in a bit of hurry—he's stone dead!" replied one of the men as he took a brief look.

It was a fact, and further, I was in the court room when his widow received a verdict for twenty thousand dollars.—M. Quad. in N. Y. World.

FATHER OF THE GREENBACK.

The Man Who Originated the Idea of Paper Money.

The man to whom Abraham Lincoln ascribed the origin of greenbacks died in Chicago recently. He was Col. Edmund Dick Taylor, who was born in Virginia, October 18, 1802. He was a cousin of President Zachary Taylor, and his father was a captain in the revolutionary war. Early in life he removed to Springfield, Ill., where he opened a general store and trading post. He became acquainted with Abraham Lincoln, urged him to study law and helped him with money to buy law books. For several years young Lincoln made his home with Mr. Taylor and his family. When Mr. Lincoln became president, at a time when American credit was low and soldiers were demanding their pay, he sent for Mr. Taylor as the man who, to use Mr. Lincoln's own words, "will know what is best to do." When the question was put to him, Mr. Taylor replied: "Issue treasury notes on the best bank paper bearing no interest. Declare it a legal tender and pay the soldiers and all other creditors with this money." Mr. Chase thought the experiment hazardous, but finally agreed to it. Thus was accomplished the greatest blessing the republic could have had at that time. These facts were made known in a letter from President Lincoln to Mr. Taylor, which he naturally cherished all his life. Col. Taylor was in the war. He was a warm friend of Grant as well as of Lincoln, and often carried messages from one to the other.—Household Companion.

An Obliging Farmer.

One hundred years ago a Mr. Marr, of Cape Elizabeth, Me., set out a willow slip, which grew to be a good-sized tree. Mr. Marr was an obliging sort of person, and he kept his grindstone—one of the few in that vicinity—under the willow by the roadside for the convenience of his neighbors. Some of the neighbors were ungrateful yokels, for often, when they had done grinding their axes, they would try their blades upon the sheltering tree, so that its beauty was spoiled and its life endangered. Then Farmer Marr drove a lot of spikes into the trunk, covering the heads artfully with bark, and when the neighboring vandals had spoiled a few axes they quit trying edges on the willow. Marr and his neighbors are all dead and forgotten these fifty years, but the willow still flourishes, and the ax marks are obliterated, while the protecting spikes are grown deep in the heart of the great trunk.—N. Y. Sun.

A Little Latin.

She—I'll never go into that horrid store again, so there!

He—Why my dear, I thought you would be better than any other.

She—So I did, but to-day I asked the clerk what one should take to build up the blood, and he exclaimed "alike ferri et quinine," and I went patronizing a man who allows his employees to wear so in the presence of ladies.—Pharmaceutical Era.

In the Fish Bag.

Opera-glass cases have a secret compartment at the bottom of the velvet lining, whose clasp is hidden from a sly owner. In this hidden recess are stowed away a powder puff, comb, a bottle of sal volatile and two or three hairpins, and the cover of the case is a mirror. A woman of ordinary inferiority could make a week's stay in this condensed Little toilet case.—N. Y. Herald.

CHANCY, Tenn., October, 1900. Owing to a runaway about a year ago, my son was thrown from a wagon and severely hurt about the head. For many days he was entirely unable to sit up and eat, and needed continual watching. At this time I learned of Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic and at once ordered a bottle. After I had given him the second dose he felt better and slept and ceased crying. The next day he was much better, and when he had used up the contents of the bottle he was entirely restored and is so still. FRED HERSHEWELL.
