Tut's Tiny Pills
To cure constipation purging the bowels should be avoided. It weakens their power of motion. A gentle aperient effect is only required. Tut's Tiny Liver Pills are prepared with special views to the permanent cure of COSTIVENESS AND HEADACHE.

They are mild and remain in the system until they act on the liver, cause a natural flow of bile and their tonic properties impart power to the bowels to remove unhealthy accumulations. Good appetite and digestion result from the use of these little pills.

THE STRANGER'S CALL.

An Incident That Interested the Mines at Homestead Diggings.

There were about two hundred men of us at Homestead Diggings, and it was the hour of noon on a summer's day when Big Jim Davis came over the hill with his pack on his back, and stood out a claim. He came alone, and that was why we noticed him so particularly.
He seemed to fight shy of us for three or four days, and that is why we wondered if he was all right. Big Jim had got a squint at the face of every man in camp before he turned out and became social. In a little time we found him to be a good fellow, and so we gradually came to forget our first suspicions.
We were still agreed, however, that there was something queer about him.
He appeared anxious and perturbed whenever a new arrival was announced, and if a party of half a dozen came along, Jim would go into hiding until he had shed them off. It was as if he suspected some one was trailing him down.

There were all sorts of men in the mining camps in those days, and it was the rule to mind your own business.
As long as a man obeyed the rules and regulations of a camp he was looked upon as all right. What he had been in the past was nothing even to his tentmate.

There was a big shanty, in the center of our village which was occupied as a store, saloon, bank and general rendezvous after working hours. I was in there one afternoon just before the miners knocked off work, when a stranger quietly entered. He had come by the trail and alone, but he had not noticed him. He was a slim, lightweight man, and though clothed in rough garb you could see at once that he was not a miner. He was unshorn and unkempt, but that was to be expected out there. He was talking with the storekeeper as I entered, asking after just such a man as Big Jim Davis.
His face struck me pleasantly enough, but there was something in his gray eyes to remind you of a wounded brute, and a something in his voice to satisfy you that he would be a pitiless enemy.

He went out before I did. Where he kept himself for the next hour I never learned. The boys had knocked off, washed up and eaten supper, and about twenty of us had lounged into the store for a smoke and a talk, when the little man suddenly showed up. This, mind you, was three months after Big Jim's coming. Jim sat on a box facing the door, which was open. I happened to be looking at him, and I suddenly saw his face grow pale and his jaw drop.
I looked over to the door and there stood the stranger. He had a leering sort of smile on his face, and was looking only at Big Jim. In ten seconds all conversation had ceased. We instinctively felt that the two were enemies, and that the little man had finally trailed Big Jim down.

It was fully two minutes before the stranger moved or spoke. Then he stepped forward until close to Big Jim and said:

"It has been over two years, but I've run you down at last!"

Davis looked at him as one who sees a specter, but made no reply.

"You have skulked and dodged like a coward!" continued the little man in the same quiet voice, "but you'll be a man now, of course. The boys will see fair play. Shall it be pistol or knife?"

If Big Jim's eyes hadn't been wide open we might have thought him a dead man. You never saw terror more plainly written on a human face.

"It's a little affair of our own, gentlemen, explained the stranger, as he turned to us. "I've traveled thousands of miles while looking for Big Jim. I've been hunting him down, to kill or be killed. This world isn't big enough for both of us. Arrange the details to suit the crowd."

Not one of us had spoken. Just as the stranger finished Big Jim recovered from his stupor and made a move for his pistol. Like a flash of lightning the little man had him covered, and then he laughed a harsh, dry laugh and said:
"I ought to shoot you down like a dog, but I'll give you a show. Come out doors.
Shall it be this or that knife?"

Big Jim turned white again and relapsed into his former state of dumbness. The stranger surveyed him in disgust and contempt, and by and by turned to us and said:

"Back in the states this white-livered coward betrayed my confidence and wrecked my home and my life. Even his dead body would disgrace your diggings.
Come, Jim!"

He stepped back and beckoned to Davis, who slowly followed, staring like one who walks in his sleep. The little man backed to the door—out of it into the moonlight, and then started up the trail. Davis followed like a dog, never looking to the right or to the left—making not the slightest move to draw his weapon. It was as if he had been mesmerized. Something of that same feeling was upon all the rest of us, for we stood at the door, speechless and amazed, and looked after the pair until they were out of sight. It was like a dream, and men rubbed their eyes as if heavy with sleep.

Up the hill—around the great black rock—past the tree on which we hung Taylor for murder, and then they were out of sight. The stranger we never saw again. A month later a prospector found Big Jim's skeleton in a ravine two miles away.—N. Y. Sun.

Fashionable Shoes.

With the exception of a few fine jet ornaments or a small buckle of Irish brilliant, all fancy decorations on dress shoes and slippers have nearly disappeared. Fine soft shoes of undressed kid, most easy and delightful to wear, are shown in many new shades to match the costume. The dove-gray and pale-tan models find the largest sale. These tinted kid shoes do very well for a change or to complete a suit of one color entire, but for real elegance and neat and refined appearance there is no foot covering that can compare with a perfect-fitting shoe of fine black French kid. It suits all styles of dress, all occasions, and makes the foot look trimmer and much smaller than a shoe of any other description.—N. Y. Post.
