CAMPAIGN PHONOGRAPHS, ORIGINAL OBSERVATIONS.

Some time ago it was decided to make deycles a part of the coming political pants. campaign. Now an even more novel proposition has been put forward-that f phonographs, which shall grind out campaign facts and arguments. In some ections of the country this plan has aleady been adopted by the local managers, and is working like a charm. The scheme is to scatter phonographs over the country, putting one in the prin-ipal square of each town. The men who are pushing the project say that phonograph cylinders would make excellent campaign thunder and would take the place of printed pamphlets o a great extent. People would listen to a political phonograph because of the novelty of the thing. The machines could be loaded from headquarters with campaign songs, both patriotic and comic, and with short speeches talked into the machines by the candidates and the most noted speakers of both sides. In this way every voter throughout the union could at his leisure listen to the voices of Bryan and McKinley, and the great orators who are talking for silver or for gold Only a small fraction of the men that will vote in Novmber have ever heard or senn the great leaders, and the phonograph it is thought would make a very satisfactory substitute.

Finally he thought of using the jat and when lifting it down from the shelf some of the liquid spilt on the floor. ourned for at least an hour. Afraid of the uses to which this discovery might be put, Mr. Floyd has never made the secret of the incredients public but he says that it can be made for al most nothing of the cheapest waste materials. And for that reason he will not let the formula become known, for incondiaries would take advantage of it and no place would be safe from burning. Thus who use oil or powder can be easily traced some preparation is necessary, but with this liquid fire a criminal who knew it's composition could burn his way noiselessly through any door or set any home on fire by throwing against it a noiseless ball of

The cost of making this liquid fire is so small that it can be easily used instead of coal in heating a furnace. But the most valuable properties are those which it possesses, which are absolutely foreign to those of fire as now known to us. All must be generated in some kind of a furnace and be constantly supplied with fuel, About a cupful can be set on fire and it will burn with a stea ly glow for an hour. This wonderful fire can be utilized in the kitchen, and stoves can be dispensed with altogether as entirely useless In order to fry anything it is only necessary to bang the pan from a wire and smear over the bottom a spoonful of the liquid In an instant there will be a hot fire, which will burn for over an hour. So that the cook of the future can take her fire out into the country, it can be used in cooking for camping; there will be no coal bills, but the work of heating furnaces, of burning fires in grates, or running motors, can paste which can be taken around in the vest pocket.
