SINCERITY WINS.

A brilliant speaker was once addressing a religious meeting in which there was young man for whose conversion many had long prayed. The speaker was very effective that evening, and his audience was strangely stirred.

There was a brief testimony meeting at the close of the address, and when a call for converts was made, the young man mentioned came forward and knelt her, when there would be a tacc of an at the alter.

"It was Mr B.'s wonderful talk that brought you to take this step, wasn't it?" so many schoolboys this seeme occurred, asked one of the young man's friends

"No, it was not," he replied. "What was it, then?"

"It was what poor old Mrs. Crane said." "Mrs. Crane?"
