POWER OF ELOQUENCE.

A Kentucky blacksmith was elected justice of the peace. The case he tried was litigation involving the ownership of a cow. The lawyers on both sides were young, ambitious, and eloquent, says the Saturday Evening Post.

The lawyer for the plaintiff spoke for half an hour in his best vein. When he sat down the new justice said: "I've done heard enough—plaintiff wins."

The lawyer for the other side protested that he had something to say, too, and that it was unfair to render a judgment until both parties to the action had been heard.

"Go ahead and talk if you want," said His Honor, "but my mind's done fully made up." The young lawyer went ahead—for an hour. He was a better orator even than his smiling and triumphant adversary. In his remarks on the cow he introduced, among other topics, the American Eagle, the Southern Cross, the Bonny Blue Flag and the Old Kentucky Home. When he sat down the new justice said:

"Well, now, don't that beat all?—defense wins."

HE LOVED AND LOST.

So many hearts that are loving—so many loves to be. I wonder, sometimes, when I need you, if you would come back to me? When I dream in the dark, and want you as the river wants the sea, I wonder a dream of days gone by don't lead your steps to me.

The day dawns gray and lonely, and then, when the night comes down, I want you where my heart is—in the gloom of Trouble Town; If you could only come to me and say the old, sweet words, Winter would thrill with the music of the Springtime mockingbirds.

Love wants its own forever: The world, so sweet and bright, Is lost without your red lips—your eyes, that made its light; And so it is, I journey, from all the world apart, Still wondering if you love me, Sweetheart! Sweetheart! Sweetheart!

THE SUNBRIGHT ONE.

Hi, little fellow, and the sunlight of your eyes, Not a sweeter world than this yonder in the skies; Why it's such a sweet one I'm doubting if you know; It's only, little fellow, because you make it so!

Hi, little fellow, with the morning face, Where roses redden and the dimples love to race! Mornin' glories on the porch want to smile your way, Early sunbeams kiss your eyes and tell you: "Time to play!"

Hi, little fellow! Your arms the dimples gem; The mother, bending over, feels the rosy round of them; Your dreams are with the angels—their peace we may not know, But the world seems close to Heaven because you make it so.
