VISIT OF ST. STEPHEN.

Thousands of Invalids Gather Twice a Year to Implore Intercession of the Martyr.

In a little church near Jerusalem, on the site of the ancient Caphargamala, thousands of the hait and lame gather semi-annually to celebrate the festival of the finding of St. Stephen's relics, to gaze on the bones of the first Christian martyr and to beg his intercession for the relief of their ailments.

St. Stephen was one of the disciples of Jesus and after the ascension was chosen one of the seven deacons. For his adherence to the new faith he was stoned to death, In the calendar of saints he has two festivals, falling on December 26 and August 3, that of the latter date commemorating the finding of his relics.

After St. Stephen's martyrdom his body lay concealed under the ruins of an old tomb at Caphargamala, 20 miles from Jerusalem. At this place, early in the fifth century, the church was served by a venerable priest named Lucian. According to tradition, Lucian was twice visited by a vision of St. Stephen, who revealed the hiding place of his bones. The priest laid the matter before the bishop of Jerusalem, who ordered him to search for the body of the first saint at the place indicated.

The coffin was found and when opened, according to chroniclers, 'there came out of it such a sweet odor that no one remembered to have ever smelled anything so agreeable." A "vast multitude" had assembled, and, it is said, 73 persons present, who were afflicted with various ailments, were immediately cured and made well again. A portion of the relics were left at Caphargamala, and the remainder taken to Jerusalem and interred in the Church of Sion. Fifteen centuries have passed since the relics of the holy protomartyr have been thought to possess miraculous healing powers.

Somewhere the river of eternal life Flows crystal clear beside a great white throne: Somewhere, my soul, beyond this earthly strife, Sweet music swells within a distant home, Upon whose streets of gold the dawn above Has risen in an endless day of love.

Somewhere there is a calm, the tempests cease The waves lie still upon the ocean's breast; Somewhere an angel, stooping, whispers, "Peace," And, lo! the ships pass safely into rest, While from afar the glory of the throne Falls on the weary voyagers coming home.

Somewhere the heart has ceased to throb in pain, The bitter tears have all been wiped away; Somewhere our lips will learn another strain, To mingle with a new, glad melody, Till through eternity the joyful song

Somewhere my Saviour, too, will wait for me, With nail-pierced hands outstretched to bring me home; Somewhere the anthem of eternity

Across the tossing billows shall be borne, To still my fears until the storm is past, And in the calm my ship comes home at last.

Is echoed by a countless white-robed throng

ALL THE WAY.

When you come to a wearisome bit of the road, Where the stones are thick and the path is steep, And the back is bowed with the heft of the load, As the narrowing away is hard to keep, Don't stop just then for a wasteful sigh, But challenge the worst with steadfast cheer; If nowhere else, there is help on high-

God's angel will hasten your pioneer. When you reach a lonesome bit of the road,

Curtained about with mist and murk, And you hear faint sounds from the dread above, Where shivering, grim hobgoblins lurk, Just laugh to scorn their doleful cries-This is the place to whistle and sing:

Brush the fog from your eyes, And close to the faith of your fathers cling.

When you stand at a sorrowful bit of the road, And a hand you loved has loosed its clasp: When streams are dry that in sweetness flowed, And flowers drop from your listless grasp; E'en now take heart, for further on

There is hope and joy and the dawn of day, You shall find again what you thought was gone; 'Tis the merry heart goes all the way.
