FIDDLING WHILE ROME BURNS.

History says that Nero fiddled while Rome burned. The United States Senate is indulging in a similar pastime.

Senator McCumber, of North Dakota, scored the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate last week for playing with the treaty of peace and the league of nations. Everyone knows that the delay in ratifying the treaty is causing unrest throughout the country and the world, as well as keeping up the high cost of living.

President Wilson has stated that the league of nations is only binding on us morally, and it in no way limits or interferes with our power or any of our rights.

There are three great moral forces embodied in the league of nations, each of which alone will prevent wars in the future.

The first is, that the league binds every nation to give three months' notice before starting a war. In three months' time the power of public opinion will be able to prevent the commencement of that war.

The second point is that no nation will be allowed to build up a traffic in arms, such as the great Krupp works of Germany did, and without which Germany never would have started the war. The third point is that every nation signing the league has agreed to impose a commercial boycott on whichever nation willfully attempts to start a war.

These three great principles will be more than ample to prevent another terrible war.

While the Senate has been dilly-dallying with the treaty and talking as if they were going to reject it, the Hapsburgs of Austria have been getting busy, and one of the grand dukes of the old dynasty actually got possession of the Hungarian government for a few days, and there are influences at work in Germany endeavoring to place the kaiser back on the throne. All these evil developments have resulted from the hostile attitude of certain senators in regard to the league of nations.

If there is no league of nations there will be nothing to prevent the old bloody warriors of Germany and Austria from plunging Europe into war again, and finally drawing us into it, as they did before. Every senator who votes against the league or who delays it by offering useless amendments is working in the interest of future wars and further slaughter of the human race. It is said that every senator is receiving piles of letters from his constituents urging prompt ratification of the league, which will not only prevent future wars, but will speedily restore the country to normal and peaceful conditions. Every citizen who believes in ending wars for all time should write to his senator urging him to vote for the ratification of the treaty.

SANITARY ORDINANCE.

Be it enacted by the Board of Aldermen and Mayor of Weldon, N. C.:

1. It shall be unlawful to use or maintain any residence or other building in the city of Weldon which is located on a lot abutting on the city sewer line, said residence or building being not more than two hundred feet from the same, where one or more persons live or congregate, unless such residence or building be provided with flush closets connected with said sewer, provided water is available from the city mains within two hundred feet from said residence or building.

2. That all properties in the city of Weldon not included under section 1 shall be governed by the requirements of the State Board of Health, Chapter 71, Public Laws of 1919.

3. It has been determined by the Mayor and Board of Aldermen that the Box and Can type of privy is best suited to the needs and conditions of the premises in the city of Weldon coming under the requirements of the State Privy Law. The Box and Can type of privy is therefore adopted as the type required in the city of Weldon. Exceptions to this ruling may be permitted only by special authority from the city government.

4. The city offers to assist the property owner in the installation of the box and can type of privy by purchasing from the manufacturer the equipment necessary to meet the requirements of this ordinance and distributing said equipment to the property owners, without profit, upon such terms as may hereafter be ordered by the City Board.

5. That all ordinances or parts of ordinances previously enacted which are in conflict with this ordinance are hereby repealed.

6. That this ordinance shall be in force from the date of its passage.

7. Violations of any of the provisions of this ordinance shall constitute a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by a fine of five dollars for the first day and one dollar for each additional day the violation is continued, dating from the time specified in official notice from the city.

Passed and adopted this 6th day of September, 1919.

MRS. JOHN E. MORECOCK.

An Appreciation.

In her eighty-fourth year this good woman passed out of her "earthly tabernacle" into the home "not made with hands" about three o'clock on the morning of September 3, 1919. For sixty years and a little more her home and ours had faced each other on opposite sides of the road. Among my earliest recollections are the gentle words and the lovely life of this noble servant of God. Her going is felt very keenly by one at least outside her immediate home circle. But it is all right. Death is the friend rather than the enemy to those who are really in Christ Jesus. And to all such our little stay in the flesh comes to be recognized as but a preparatory school getting us ready for the larger and richer experiences in that home beyond the veil. Happy are those who learn to use all the experiences of the flesh and in the flesh as a constant and ever-enlarging preparation for something better! In my observation of many people in many places I don't know that I can recall a person who seems to me to have succeeded better along this line than did Mrs. Morecock. Where others saw only evil, she could find good; when others were pessimistic and discouraged, she could find ground for hope and assurance of better things; where others lost their heads and gave expression to words that were not becoming to the saints, she was possessed of equilibrium that led her to say the right thing and of a love that sent forth the soft answer that "turneth away wrath." She loved the beautiful, the true and the good because such attributes were inherent in her own soul. She was a woman whose personality would be marked in any company. She was an earnest, devout and consecrated Christian, and of course was a woman of real and helpful power.

She leaves four daughters and two sons with their respective families. One son had preceded her into the spirit land. In his matchless encomium on the ideal woman (Proverbs 31) the wise man says that her children rise up and call her blessed. In this case the children on the south side of the road would join with those on the north side in declaring themselves greatly blessed in the memory of her who was for so many years the heart and center of the Morecock home, and who was at the same time an angel of light and blessing to all who knew her.

In answering the question, "Is life worth living?" some one has wittily said, "It depends on the 'liver.'" When one observes the outcome of life's ups and downs in such a character as the one under consideration, he realizes beyond question that the achievement of such a character is worth infinitely more than its cost even though that cost be written over and over again in blood and tears.

Our world is better because she lived. Heaven is richer because of her home going. May her dear ones and friends prove themselves worthy the good example, the worthy name, and the precious memory that she has handed down to them!

W. R. CULLOM,
Raleigh, Sept. 8, 1919.

"INVESTIGATIONS" into the war are popular with the present Republican Congress because they offer a hope of distracting the public mind to the past. Why don't the Republican leaders show an equal interest in the high cost of living and other problems of the present?
