LIVING HAPPY.

Can We Do Anything at Training Ourselves in This Direction?

The difference between a happy person and a miserable one is largely a matter of appreciation. The former sees the mercies and blessings and opportunities of his life, and enjoys them; the latter does not see them. It isn't that there are more of them in the one case than in the other; indeed, strange as it may seem, it is quite frequently the other way. Some very unhappy people have a great many things that ought to help to make them happy, while others contrive somehow to enjoy life reasonably well on decidedly slim pocketbooks and a meager menu of opportunities. Nearly every man's life would seem to have the possibilities of real happiness in it if only he could be brought somehow to see and use the things that make life happy. The miserable person is not the one who hasn't this or that or the other, but rather the one who hasn't yet learned the art of living happily.

Can we do anything at training ourselves in this direction? That is an important question, for we cannot feel that to go through life with a smile on our face and song in our heart is a reasonable and right and Christian thing to do. And if we are not doing it, is it not a fact that not only are we robbing ourselves of something that heaven clearly meant for us, but we are as well spoiling our lives of much of their usefulness? Since the world began an unhappy man has never been a very useful or inspiring one.

It is possible for us to do something at schooling ourselves into happiness. It may not be easy to do, and we may not succeed in our efforts all at once, but the end to be gained is surely worth some struggle and persistence. It will help some, indeed it will help very much, if we will consistently and persistently try to keep our thought upon the mercies and blessings and opportunities of our lives, opportunities that, even at the lowest estimate of them, are so many and so wonderful, and that, if rightly seen, ought to fill us with appreciation and gratitude and zest, the very materials out of which real happiness is built.

HARD LIVING.

The tramp, who had been to the house prospecting, came out and joined his companion on the roadside.

"What luck?" asked the waiting one.

"None," growled the other. "I don't like this business of asking for bread and getting a stone."

"Well, said the first one in a tone of philosophic resignation and grim humor, "aint as bad as askin' for bread and getting a bulldog."

MAJESTY OF THE LAW.

Mistress: "I should think you would be ashamed to let that policeman kiss you."

Maid: "Yes, but how could I resist the law?"

Tired

"I was weak and run-down," relates Mrs. Eula Burnett, of Dalton, Ga. "I was thin and just felt tired, all the time. I didn't rest well. I wasn't ever hungry. I knew, by this, I needed a tonic, and as there is none better than—"

CARDUI

The Woman's Tonic

"... I began using Cardui," continues Mrs. Burnett. "After my first bottle, I slept better and ate better. I took four bottles. Now I'm well, feel just fine, eat and sleep, my skin is clear and I have gained and sure feel that Cardui is the best tonic ever made."

Thousands of other women have found Cardui just as Mrs. Burnett did. It should help you.

WITH YOU AND A DREAM

BY FRANK L. STANTON.

I know not what sunshine lights meadow and stream—
I dwell in the shadow, with you and a dream!
A dream of the years, with their hopes and their fears,
And the garden whose roses are rimmed with Love's tears!
How strange the world echoes, that drift to me, seem,
Here in the shadow, with you and a dream!

For the world will have dreamers, as Day,
That hide in their sad hearts the sweet dreams away;
Dreamers of tresses once kissed and caressed
As the winds of the world tossed them over Love's breast!
A light in the darkness—a blur in the beam,
They hear in Time's valleys the steps of a dream.

And Life, with its wisdom, seems little of worth,
For the sake of a dream that brought heaven to earth;
That peopled the thorny and desolate sod
With the lilies of light and the angels of God!
Oh, heaven itself but a shadow shall seem,
Lost to the joy of a beautiful dream!

CALL ME SWEETHEART

BY DORA REED GOODALE.

Oh, the green fields where laughed and dreamed together,
In a world of song and flowers!
What to us were toil and trouble, wind or weather,
While Rose of Youth was ours?
Call me sweetheart now the golden locks are white, dear,
Now the step and pulse are slow;
We were sweetheart once when heart and foot were light, dear,
In the days of long ago.

Youth was brave with many a plume and wreath long tarnished,
Rich in many a gallant quest!
Wit and fancy, pride and mirth have vanished—vanished;
Love outliners all the rest.
Call me sweetheart though the locks are scant and white, dear,
Though the step and pulse are slow;
We were sweethearts once when heart and foot were light, dear,
In the days of long ago.

Childhood's Eden we shall nevermore recapture
To behold the visions there:
Never tread again the morning peaks of rapture,
Nor the wine-press of despair.
Call me sweetheart now the golden locks are white, dear,
Now the step and pulse are slow;
We were sweethearts once when heart and foot were light, dear,
In the days of long ago.

THE PROOFREADER'S NEMESIS.

An Account of the Wedding.

"What's the matter?" inquired the foreman, as he entered the sanctum for copy and noted the editor's bleeding nose, swollen forehead, puffed, red eye, and tattered, dusty coat. "Fall down stairs?" "No—only that," replied the editor, pointing his finger to a paragraph in the paper before him. "It's our account of the Crapley-Smith wedding. It ought to read, 'Miss Smith's dimpled, shining face formed a pleasing contrast with Mr. Crapley's strong, bold physiognomy.' But see how it is printed." And the foreman read, "Miss Smith's pimply, skinny face formed a pleasing contrast with Mr. Crapley's stony, bald physiognomy." "Crapley was just in here," continued the editor, throwing one bloodstreaked handkerchief into the waste-basket and feeling in his pocket for a clean one, "and he—just send that fool of a proofreader in here! There's fight in me yet!"

THE FAIR SEX.

The average woman is a good actress off the stage.

It's hard for women to keep money as secrets.

Nothing melts a dignified girl like an unexpected kiss.

Ever notice how gracefully the average woman doesn't eat?

When gossip meets gossip, then comes the wagging of tongues.

A woman isn't necessarily industrious because she has a busy tongue.

Most girls are aware that big bows on their shoes make their feet look smaller.

The most changeable thing in the world is a woman. The next is another woman.

Success is apt to come to those who count every cent and make every cent count.

Next to having a good complexion a woman would like to have a good husband.

Nothing pleases a girl more than her ability to keep some man away from a designing widow.

Why it flatters a woman to be told that she looks like an actress is more than a mere man can understand.

MEANT GIFT TO BE USEFUL.

Sending Wedding Present Knew Quite Well What Her Sister Would Need in Time.

"What a peculiar choice for a wedding present," remarked an English-woman, trying not to laugh as she inspected a huge flatiron which her charwoman had just purchased.

"Aint it, ma'am?" said the charwoman. "It's my sister that's getting married, and I'm repaying her for the gift she sent on for me on my weddin' day."

"Did she send you something very ugly, then?"

"Deed, no, ma'am. Her's was a beautiful present. But, you see, ma'am, a little bird whispered to me that her future husband's a man of violent temper, and I thought I'd send her something that would be useful in case of family disputes. She has the straightest aim with a flatiron I ever seed!"

DISAPPOINTMENT.

"You said you would be home at eleven, and here I have been keeping awake this last two hours waiting for you to come in!" said an angry wife.

The delinquent leaned against the wall and prepared to remove his boots.

"And I," he said softly and sorrowfully, "have been waiting outside for this last hours so's you'd go to sleep!"

TOO GOOD TO BE TRUE.

Wife—John, a man called this afternoon and said he would supply us with enough electricity to light our house, do all our cooking and run the washing machine for only $1 a month. What do you think of that?

Hub—You should have told him that when we want current fiction we'll get it at the bookstore.

HE GOT HIS.

Polygamy is severely punished, remarked Jiggers.
Don't I know it? gloomily replied Jagers. I married my wife's whole family.
