

LONDON, November 2.

HORSE-GUARDS, October 31.

of which the following is an extract, has been received by the right honorable Henry Dundas, one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state, from vice admiral Elphinstone, dated on board his majesty's ship Monarch, Simons Bay, Cape of Good Hope, August 18, 1795.

A stone was thrown at the king's coach on his return from Covent Garden theatre on Friday night. From the darkness of the night, and the mob who filled the streets, it was impossible to discover the miscreant who did it.

After all the contradictory accounts concerning our two unfortunate homeward bound fleets, the following may be relied upon as facts:

Of the Mediterranean fleet, two thirds are missing. About 90 ships sailed from Gibraltar, of which only 32 are arrived.

Of the Jamaica fleet, besides the eight ships known to be taken, there are eleven ships wanting, making in the whole, nineteen sail taken or missing.

M. Monneron's return to England is daily expected: his mind has been lately diverted from the original object of his mission; and there are intelligent men who affirm, that since the late triumph of the convention, future negotiations of the two countries will be of a pacific nature.

From the same authority we are assured, that, previously to any negotiations, the convention insist, that Great Britain shall acknowledge the French republic.

WILMINGTON, January 21.
For the WILMINGTON CHRONICLE.

Mr. Printer,

I had the honor some time past to dine in company with two gentlemen, both substantial Cape Fear planters, when the subject of conversation turned on the politics of the times, and more particularly on the operation of the war in Europe upon the agricultural interest of this country.

From the London Gazette, of 31st Oct. 1795.

"Downing-street, 23d Oct. 1795.
"The ratification of the treaty of amity, commerce, and navigation, between his majesty and the United States of America, signed the 19th of November last, were this day exchanged by lord Grenville, his majesty's principal secretary of state for foreign affairs, with William Allen Deas, esq. charge d'affaires from the United States."

WILMINGTON, January 21.
For the WILMINGTON CHRONICLE.

Mr. Printer,

I had the honor some time past to dine in company with two gentlemen, both substantial Cape Fear planters, when the subject of conversation turned on the politics of the times, and more particularly on the operation of the war in Europe upon the agricultural interest of this country. After a serious and sensible discussion, the point agreed upon was, that provisions of every kind would be in great demand: their prospects of immense crops, and the idea of an enhanced price being given, so dilated and expanded their hearts (though I do not mean to suggest they were ever closed to objects of charity) that on the name of a certain distressed inhabitant of this county being mentioned, they both, by a sudden impulse of benevolence, pledged themselves to the company, that they would, on gathering their crops, compliment him with two barrels of corn each.—As these two gentlemen have received, for that disinterested and noble flow of benevolence, not only high and exalted encomiums, but also the approbation of their own hearts, I trust, on being reminded (for they desired they should) perform with the most scrupulous punctuality their several promises.

A FRIEND TO THE POOR.

On Friday morning last, a duel was fought near this town between mr. S——, and mr. D——, when the latter was slightly wounded in the thigh.

DIED.] On the 3d ult. after a few minutes illness, David McNeil, esq. of Cumberland county; a gentleman universally lamented.
