

A VOLCANO IN THE SEA.

Masses of Lava Thrown to the Surface of Water—An Earthquake.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 9.—The Honolulu Gazette of Feb. 28 contains an account of a remarkable submarine volcanic outbreak in Koolaukaka bay, near the entrance to the harbor. The natives report that the eruption occurred at 3 o'clock on the morning of the 21st, appearing like innumerable red, blue, and green lights. In the afternoon several boats visited the eruption, cruising over the most active part, where the water was in a state of peculiar activity, boiling and appearing as though passing over rapids, or very much like the water at Hell Gate, New York. Blocks of lava two feet square were lifted up from below, frequently striking and jarring the boats. As the lava was soft, no harm was done. Nearly all of the pieces on reaching the surface were red hot, emitting steam and gas, strongly sulphurous. A rumbling noise was heard, like that of rocks in a freshet, caused, no doubt, by the eruption of lava from the submarine crater, which is supposed to be a crack or line of rupture extending at least a mile from shore. Another rupture, doubtless a continuation of the submarine fissure, was traced inland from shore nearly three miles, varying in width from a few inches to three feet. In some places water was seen pouring into the abyss below.

A severe shock of earthquake was felt by residents of Kaowala and Kell in the night of the eruption, which must have preceded the outbreak.

A Duel on Horseback.

New Orleans, March 9.—In Catahoula parish, on Saturday, two lives were sacrificed for a fatless woman. John Henry, colored, loved the wife of Lew Butcher, also colored, and in order to get the husband out of the way invited him out to hunt. When in the woods, Henry lagged behind, and when the opportunity presented itself, lodged a load of buck shot in Butcher's back. Butcher, although mortally hurt, turned in his saddle to see whether he had been shot through accident or design. When noticing Henry, scarcely a yard distant, trying to reach his musket, which, after the shooting, he had laid across his saddle, the truth burst upon him, and he knew that his only chance for life lay in killing Henry.

Quickly leveling his musket, Butcher fired just as Henry turned to flee, and sent a load of buck shot through his back, causing death almost instantaneously. Butcher then hastened home which he reached in time to tell this story and die.

Guano on the Brain and in the Olfactory.

There was an ex-newspaper man, disciple of Esculapian, guano merchant, agriculturist, and, we will add, clever fellow and perfect gentleman, who was a delegate to the late Millidgeville convention and the writer's room mate.

He hailed from the country which our worthy contemporary Woods has made so famous for vegetables, fish and snakes, and is doing a most prosperous business in the sale of fertilizers.

Five dollars net profit on every ton pays very well, especially when you can sell twenty tons and job one hundred dollars in a single day as our friend did last week. No wonder, then, that he should be enthused upon the guano subject. But now for our story:

It seems that this delegate to the convention had a sample of "E. F. Coe" on his mantle-piece in a small box, and on leaving home, put it into his pocket in lieu of his snuff receptacle.

So absorbed was he afterwards in thinking of his favorite occupation, that he took pinch after pinch of the fertilizer with apparently the keenest relish, and without discovering the difference.

It was only after he reached Millidgeville and offered his guano snuff to a friend, that the mistake transpired and he became sensible of the odor. Of course he will never hear the last of it. But he is a jolly good fellow, and takes it first rate; besides he don't plead guilty to the soft impeachment, and pretends to say it is all a joke.—Macon Telegraph & Messenger.
