The "Sarotoga limp," "kangaroo hop," and "camel step" are all out of fashion, and fashionable ladies don't know what gait to strike.

A fashionable journal declares that in less than six years knee-breeches and six-inch skirts will be the fashionable street dress for ladies.

We are requested to call the attention of the City Health officer to the corner of 4th and Mulberry streets, where the body of a defunct cat is quietly reposing. Will you see to it Mr. Officer? You can then get "the essence of it."

Sound Party.

And now the old Batchelors are to indulge in a picnic at Wrightsville Sound on Tuesday night. They expect the ladies to furnish the baskets, and we suppose the ladies have no objection to the O. B.'s filling them.

The Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows, for the State of North Carolina, will convene in Salisbury on Tuesday of next week. The delegates from this city who will be in attendance are Maj. M. P. Jones, Esq., Grand Master, will of course be in attendance, as will also Past Grands W. J. Yopp, Jos. L. Keen and B. S. Townsend, all of this city.

There is some talk, we understand, of an excursion from Salisbury to the mountains, over the Western N. C. Railroad, and this will probably take place on Friday.

City Court.

The only case brought before the Mayor this morning was that of three jolly sons of old Neptune, who started on a cruise last night, but shipped too heavy a quantity of benzine before starting, so that their crafts became unmanageable and they failed to navigate according to the rules laid down on the Mayor's chart; consequently they were overhauled by the police and taken safely to the Guard House station, where they remained until this morning, when they were called to appear before the Mayor, who, after hearing the case and taking into consideration the fact that these representatives of a poor and much abused class of people had been aboard ship for over forty-nine days, and had just landed on terra firma, concluded to let them off with $10 a piece and costs.

EASTERN NORTH CAROLINA.

Rivers of the Northern Division.

FOURTH PAPER.

Eastern Carolina proper, which comprises measurably the alluvial and sandy formations, and which is also the campaign area, is between the Coast line and eastern out-cropping of the Graunville belt, that stretches entirely across the State and divides Eastern and Central North Carolina. The eastern margin is almost as distinctly defined as the Atlantic Coast line, and produces the falls or rapids in our rivers that we see upon the Roanoke at Weldon, the Tar at Rocky Mount, the Neuse above Smithfield, the Cape Fear above Averasboro and the Yadkin at Grassy Island. This water power, at these falls if developed, would spin and weave all the cotton grown upon the globe.

From the foot of this stone range to the east, is the section that the midland and western people, call "down the country."

In our description of the rivers, we will embrace all the drainage area that flows into the eastern sea-board. Convenience and sperspicuity dictate that we divide the eastern section into three subdivisions. That north of the Roanoke and Albemarle Sound will be termed the northern division. The middle division is the country lying between the Roanoke and Neuse rivers, and the two great inland sounds. We designate as the south east division, that lying South of the Neuse and Pamlico Sound. We will first consider the northern division. In this section the rivers all flow to the South or parallel with the coast, while in the other sections the flow is lateral or toward the Ocean.

THE GREAT DISMAL SWAMP lies between Albemarle Sound and Chesapeake Bay, and is environed on three sides by a broad belt of arable lands, noted for their productiveness and the great variety of crops they produce. These lands lie on the east between the swamp and Currituck Sound, on the south between the swamp and Albemarle Sound, and on the west between the swamp and the Chowan. Six navigable rivers flow into our State that find their source in this swamp. The North Landing and Northwest rivers seek Currituck Sound, while the North, Pasquotank, Little and Perquimons rivers all find an outlet in Albemarle Sound. West of the Dismal Swamp three navigable rivers flow into our State from Virginia—the Meherrin, Nottoway and Blackwater. The two last named rivers unite near the Virginia line and form the noted CHOWAN RIVER, which is soon after augmented by receiving the waters of the Meherrin. The Chowan finds its way into Albemarle Sound through Edenton bay. The course of this river is from north to south, and it is noted for its navigability and broad bay-like surface and its varied and striking scenery, caused by alternating long vistas of level plains and peculiar high bluffs, whose cone-shaped crests are covered by cedar, holly and other evergreens. From time immemorial the Chowan has been visited by travelers and lovers of the picturesque, to view this wonderful diversity of landscape scenery, which is thought to surpass any scenery to be seen on the South Atlantic coast.

THE CASHIE RIVER is one of the four navigable arms that drain into the head of Albemarle Sound. In some respects this river is the most remarkable one in the State. Many years ago, when Sir Charles Lyle made his visit through the South, he was instructed by the Royal Geographical Society to visit this river. In his report he states that "the Cashie is the most sinuous and deepest river in the world, all things equal, and is from 80 to 120 feet deep, with banks as perpendicular as the walls of a house." The entire river is embraced in the county of Bertie.

THE ROANOKE RIVER is formed by the junction of the Staunton and Dan rivers. The Dan is an outflow from the Blue Ridge in this State, but passes into Virginia above Danville and near Clarksville unites with the Staunton, thus forming the Roanoke, which reaches this State through Warren county, and after many meanderings finds the head of Albemarle Sound. This river is navigable at all seasons of the year up to the falls at Weldon. Above the falls steam is never used, but it is navigated by pole barges, both upon the Roanoke and Dan. Prof. Kerr, in his report, states that an river at Danville is only 200 above tide-level. This being the case, the average fall of the Roanoke and Dan is not as great as that of the Cape Fear between Wilmington and Fayetteville. The Roanoke flows over horizontal levels 8 to 10 miles long, connected by short abrupt rapids. If it be possible to remove these abrupt steps by what engineers call the warping process, and thereby equalize the fall of this river, it would be a matter of great interest. In 1824 Fulton, the eminent English engineer, surveyed the Roanoke and reported that in his opinion it was possible to make the Roanoke and Dan navigable at a moderate cost. In 1818 Price and Clements made a survey to ascertain the practicability of uniting by canal, the Neuse, Tar and Roanoke rivers by the way of Newbern, Washington and Plymouth. The survey demonstrated the practicability of the plan. Should this be carried out some future day, the navigation of the Roanoke above the falls would be a matter of great importance to the people of this State. The Roanoke and Dan are both noted for the great fertility of the extensive basins they drain. The Dan is specially noted for its coal beds, and the deposits of rich iron ore and other minerals, which must in some future day find a water carriage to our seaboard.

What a Sneeze Means.

As a rule a sneeze is the warning nature gives, that some part of the body is exposed to a cooler temperature than the other parts, and that the sneezer is "catching cold." Next to the warning, what is the use of the sneeze? It throws open the pores of the whole body and induces a gentle perspiration; in a word it throws off the cold. A child rarely sneezes more than twice—perspiration is readily induced in youth; an old man, on the contrary, sneezes half a dozen to a dozen times, with a loudly explosive "catchogue." It is harder to set him perspiring. When one is sitting by an open window and finds himself sneezing nature tells him he is taking cold. He should take a full tumbler of cold water to keep up the gentle perspiration that the sneeze sets in motion. If he does this, he will not be telling an hour after that he has a "cold in his head," or chest, or lungs.

For the Review.
Mr. Editor: Our last Legislature, in the very abundance of its wisdom, saw fit to appoint two "Boards of Health" for this city, perhaps feeling that the dereliction of one would certainly be compensated for by the assiduity of the other. What is our surprise, therefore, this morning, to encounter two ignorant persons "nosing" around our back lots, in the name of the City Marshal, issuing mandatory orders that certain things shall be done which ought to be determined upon only by these "Boards."

No good citizen will offer any fictitious opposition to the effective sanitary policing of the city, but it is well known that in many instances the orders spoken of are issued solely in the interest of scavengers, against the judgment of the householders, and not seldom without inspection of the premises.

Would it not be better for all such measures to be carried on under the authority and direction of one of those Boards, so that at least we may feel that an intelligent head is occupied with the preservation of our health?
