with the Association. The lines are as follows:

DINNER OF THE ANOCIATION OF OFFICERS OF THE THIRD NORTH CARO-LINA INFANTRY, MAY, 16TH, 1879. "OUR DEAD!"

Who fears to speak of "Sixty-one?" Who blushes at its fame?

When cowards sneer at deeds then done, Who hangs his bead in shame? He's all a knave or half a slave, Who slights his record thus; But a true man, like you, men, Will fill your glass with us.]

We drink the memory of the brave, The faithful-not a few-Some lie pear Potomac's wave, Some sleep in "Oakdale" too: Hundreds are gene-but still live on Fhe names of those who died, All true men, like you men, Remember them with pride!

Some 'neath the sod of distant States Their patient hearts have laid, Where, with the strangers heedless haste, Their unwatched graves were made; But the' their clay be far from us, Where friends may never come, In true men, like you, men,

Their spirit's still at home. The dust of some is Southern earth,

Among their own they rest; For the same land that gave them birth, Has caught them to her breast, And we will pray, that from their clay Full many a race may start Of true men, like you, men, To act as brave a part

They rose in dark and evil days To right their native land; They kindled here a living blaze That nothing could withstand. Alas! That might should vanquish right! They fell and passed away; And true men, like you, men

Then here's their memory-may it be For us a guiding light To cheer-tho' lost our liberty-

And lead us in the right. Through good and ill be patriots still By each good impulse stirred, And you men, be true men Like the dead of "the gallant Third."

We doubt not that every Confederate who reads this poem will be charmed with

> The same correspondent also informs us of another attempt at murder which did not succeed. Two colored women, whose names our friend does not give, were walking along the road together night before last, at a point about five miles from Fremont, when they were fired upon by some one concealed in the bushes by the roadside, and one of the women was severely, but not dangerously, wounded in the groin and thigh. No motive, besides jealously, can be conceived for the deed and it is thought that the wo man who was not injured was the one fired at and that the intending assassin is one Hoggans, colored, who is said to have been recently discarded by the woman, who soon after married his rival. No arrests had been made at last accounts

Lippincott's Magazine.

Lippincott's Magazine makes a specialty of articles depicting social life and manners at home and abroad, and this feature is conspicuous in the June number. In 'State and Society in Ottawa" we have an entertaining description of the vice-regal court with handsome illustrations. The second, of Mrs. Wister's two papers on Paris brings the splendors of the Old World into juxtaposition with those of the New. "Housekeeping in Texes" is another finely illus trated paper, and presents a graphic picture of domestic life in the Southwest before and since the war. Somewhat in the same vein, and not less amusing, is the continua ation of Miss Porter's papers on Village Life in the South. An article on "American Fiction," by M. G. Van Rensselaer, shows keen critical sagacity, and a paper on Sir William Johnson, deals with an interesting episode tin our colonial history.
