trai flies, crammed the silver head into his mouth until he turned purple in the face, and finally reached over and jabbed a woman under the left shoulder. His father then grasped the cane, laid it away, and whispered:

'Young man, I'll tan the hide off'n you when we get home!

The words were intended to make the boy pay strict attention to the balance of the sermon. He straightened up, looked at the preacher again, and tried hard to understand the discourse. The good man was trying to explain the difference between theoretical and Spartanburg. practical Christianity, and in two minutes the lad's eyes were fixed on the chandeliers. He counted the number and satisfaction guaranteed. of burners over and over again, and forgetting himself for an instant he began to sing. His father gave him a bock and leaned over and whispered?

'Ou! boy, I'll make you jump the miunte we get into the house !' Knowing that his father would keep his Jas. word, but yet hoping to break the fo ce of the prospective 'peeling' by being real good for the next half hour, the boy faced the clergyman again. his determination to understand and interest himself in all that was said. The good man was drawing a parallel, aud a dozen of the church members were half asleep. It was discouraging, and after two or three minutes the boy got hold of a bit of paper, wadded it up, stuff d it into bis mouth, and clewed it a while, and balancing the wad on his thumb, he elevated it ten feet towards the ceiling.

The law of gravitation applies to paper wads as well as to iron weights. The one come down in a short time, and, as luck would have it, it struck the bald pate of the half asleep sexton. The victim gave a start of alarm, whirled qu ckly around, and the boy's ers ascommodated at moderate prices. father pinched him savagely and whispered:

'Oh! I'll fix you for thi ! Just let me get you home once !'

I couldn't see how the boy was to blame. He couldn't understand one word in ten of the sermon; he saw a dezen men around him asleep; it was a bot day; he was a nervous boy and used to moving around, and his own isther had been gazing out of the window in an absent way for a quarter of, of an hour. He made a last grand l is teeth hard, and sat as erect as a new hitching post. The clergyman seemed to look right at the boy as he used twenty big words in succession, and the lad gave it up. A Candid Opinion.

A Detroit lawyer, famous for his wise and candid opinions, was the other day visited by a young attorney; who explained:

? 'I was admitted to the Bar two years ago, and I think I ought to know something about law, yet the minute l arise to address a jury I forget all my points and can say nothing. Now I want to ask you if this don't show a l ck of confidence in myself, and how can I overcome it?'

The wise attorney shut his eyes and studied the cause before answering.
