

The Daily Review

JOSH. T. JAMES, Editor & Prop.

WILMINGTON, N. C.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 12, 1879.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT WILMINGTON, N. C., AS SECOND-CLASS MATTER.

VEWS AND REVIEWS.

More than $700,000 is realized in France by parcel making.

A single property in California is half the size of Rhode Island.

According to the Russian paper Rasvet the total number of Jewish farmers in Russia is now probably upward of 100,000.

The Polish residents of New York, on Saturday, celebrated the anniversary of Count Pulaski's heroic death at Savannah in 1779.

In Chicago, during the present year, one thousand and sixty-five new buildings, mostly brick, have been erected, at an aggregate expense of $5,454,000.

Apartments prepared for Grant at the Gibson House, Cincinnati, are said to be 'fit for a king.' The greatest extravagance is shown in the real lace bedspread and other shams.

A tablet erected to the memory of the late Commodore Vanderbilt in the Church of the Strangers, New York, was unveiled on Saturday in the presence of a company specially invited.

The profits of the Astor House, New York, on an average, are larger than those of any other hotel in that city. The receipts of the lunch room alone are said to be sufficient to pay the rent.

Mrs. Hendricks, it is said, believes she shall yet live in the White House. Mrs. Lincoln had a similar premonition, and used to say of her husband, 'He's going to be President, or I shouldn't have married him, for he isn't pretty, you know?'

It was decided at a meeting held on Saturday by prominent citizens of Elmira, N. Y., to zealously push the work of erecting a monument to the memory of Adam. A committee of three was appointed to correspond with eminent sculptors for the purpose of securing designs, suggestions and estimates upon the cost of the memorial.

The Matrimonial Aid and Benevolent Society of Cincinnati started with great zeal last summer. A picnic, at which the Mayor presided, and three couples were wedded under the society's auspices, yielded a profit of $2,000, and it was announced that the work of encouraging poor young persons to marry would be pushed by giving them financial help. But the scheme has already failed. There is no money in the Treasury, the young husbands and wives have not received the promised assistance, and it is even charged that the wedding rings, presented to the three brides at the picnic, are only plated.

The Pope received on Sunday, Nov. 23rd, 500 representatives of the League of the Apostolate of Prayer—an organization which promotes devotion to the Sacred Heart. He eulogized that devotion as in the front rank of means of salvation, remarking: 'The heart of Jesus is a perfect model of the most sublime virtues; it is the inexhaustible source of the richest treasury of Heaven; everybody may find in it peace of heart, relief of suffering, blessing on enterprises; a sweet refuge in life, and especially at the hour of death. This is what we are told and assured by the heroine of the Sacred Heart, the blessed Marguerite Alacoque.'

The German traveller Ernst von Weber, strongly advocates the acquisition by Germany of certain points on the eastern and western coasts of Africa. The establishment of German colonies in southern Africa is a favorite idea of Herr von Weber's and upward of four years ago he wrote a memorandum proposing a scheme by which Germany should obtain possession of Delagoa Bay and the Transvaal, the German-African empire of the future, which he sent from Southern Africa to the Emperor William and Bismarck. The Prince thanked him for his patriotic proposal, but added that he could not hold out any hope of the realization of the scheme.

The prospect for a canal at the upper end of Manhattan Island, connecting with the North and East rivers by way of the Harlem, is reviving, and it looks now as if that might be a fact before the Brooklyn bridge or the Hudson River tunnel. The cost will not be over $2,100,000. A depth of twelve to fifteen or eighteen feet will be secured, and the upper end of the island will, if the scheme works, be transformed. Line the Harlem River with shipping and open Long Island Sound to commerce, and business may drift up that way and fashion work back again to the Battery for its homes. Considering that Gen. Newton, of Hell Gate fame, is at the head of this work, it may be expected to go if the appropriation is made.

ANXIOUS FOR A MONARCHY.

The sentiment of the people of the North for the complete overthrow of every principle of State sovereignty is undoubtedly a growing one. Ever since the rehabilitation of the Southern States, after the close of the war, this sentiment has been cropping out in certain localities and from those who have considerable weight and influence in political matters. It has grown in favor and popularity within the last three or four years. It is true that there is yet a strong feeling against it, but the accumulation of testimony goes to show that it is gaining in favor, especially among the smaller class of politicians and the extreme portion of the voting population. To give an idea of the feeling at the North, we quote the following preamble to a petition of William Giles Dix, of Peabody, Mass., which was presented to the Senate on the 9th inst., by Senator Hoar, of that State: 'The time has come when the doctrine of State sovereignty, logically a begging of the question and historically a lie, should be eradicated from the civil structure of the United States, and when the principle and the fact of national sovereignty, claiming the direct allegiance of all and directly guarding the rights of all, should be thoroughly and forever confirmed by organic law, beyond the reach of doubt, denial, or defiance.'

Connected with this preamble was a petition for a national convention to form a new constitution after the plan indicated by the spirit of the foregoing, which was referred, on motion, to the Judiciary Committee. It may never again be heard from, but in all probability, it will be followed by a host of others, conceived in the same spirit and incubated in the same nest.

SLAVERY IN NEW ENGLAND.

It is well known that the Northern States, while British colonies, were the first to own slaves, and that they turned to profitable account the shipping and commercial advantages of that section by engaging in the importation of negroes from Africa to be sold as slaves. It is a fact well known that in this enterprise of slave stealing and slave selling the New England States, then British colonies, were more largely engaged than any other portion of the country, but it is, perhaps, not generally known among the people of this section that their slave-selling was not confined exclusively to the African race, and that while they imported negroes they at the same time did quite a thriving business in exporting and selling as slaves in the West India islands the Indians captured by them. Those Old Puritans had a peculiarly impressive way of transacting business, although it would seem to us of the present day that their style of mixing holy with secular things was, to say the least in rather bad taste. The following, which we quote from a letter written to John Winthrop, who was then Colonial Governor of Massachusetts, combines saintliness with slavery in a most graphic manner: 'Sir—Mr. Eudecot and myself salute you in the Lord Jesus, etc. We have heard of a dividence of women and children [Negro captives] in the bay and would be glad of a share, viz., a young woman or girl and a boy, if you think good. I wrote to you for some boys for Bermudas.'

In a letter written in 1645 to the same occurs the following: 'If upon a Just warre with the Narraganset the Lord should deliver them into our hands, we might easily have men, women and children enough to exchange for Moores, which will be more gainefull pillidge for us than we conceive, for I do not see how we can thrive until we get into a stock of slaves sufficient to do all our business for our children's children will hardly see this great Continent filled with people, see that our servants will still desire freedom to plant for them selves, and not to stay but for very great wages. And I suppose you know verie well how we shall mayntayne 20 Moores cheaper than one English servant.'

THE EXODUS MOVEMENT. We have had occasion, in a former issue of the Review, to speak of the exodus of a large number of colored people from Lenoir county to Indiana where, they have been led to believe by the unprincipled knaves whose dupes they are, a land of milk and honey and the largest amount of wages for the smallest amount of labor awaits them. We mentioned that the movement was inaugurated and put in execution solely for the purpose of colonizing a sufficient number of voters in that State to assure it to the Republicans in the next Presidential election; and we also stated that the ignorance and credulity of the colored race would lead to untold suffering to them in consequence of this new colonization scheme. We were correct in our conclusions, for, although the exodus has not fairly begun as yet, the suffering is upon them in fearful reality. Hundreds are waiting at Goldsboro, having disposed of every worldly possession in order to reach the 'promised land,' and expended it all before the journey had fairly commenced. There they are, dependent upon charity, but eager and anxious to push forward, and waiting hopefully for some one to furnish the means by which they can proceed. A great many have reached Washington, where they have been obliged to remain in consequence of a lack of the necessary funds. There they are also supported by charity and are actually suffering for the comforts and necessities of life. A very few have reached Indiana, and they send back a dismal and pitiable account of the condition in which they find themselves placed, and while they warn their race not to attempt to leave their present homes, they also make the most imploring appeals to help by which they may be able to return to North Carolina. The following extract from a letter from one of the most intelligent of those who have reached Indiana, which we clip from the Goldsboro Messenger, reveals the true condition of affairs with the colored people in that State: GREENCASTLE, IND., Dec. 6, 1879.

Please tell Perry Wade and Stephen Allen and mother and all that they will help me to get home. Mr. Fields, will you please help me? Tell Perry Wade to come to you. Tell them to stay where they are a d wait until I come, and I will tell all about it. I tried to get word back to all to stay there, as I told them I would. Tell all my people to stay and I will come back as soon as I can. I am thankful to you sir. I will close by saying stop all you can from coming here. Your friend is in distress to come home. Get them word soon. I am promised $12 a month but it is so cold I have not made but six days' work yet. Write soon.

NATHANIEL WADE, Greencastle, Putnam Co. It is bad for colored people that come here. You be sure of that. Excuse my bad writing. I am afraid to get anybody to do my writing. They don't want me to let it be known how it is out here. They are getting along bad.'

MOONSHINE

The most inquisitive person we have heard of recently was the young man in France who dropped a lighted cigar into the bughole of an empty petroleum cask and then applied his eye to said bughole to watch the result. It is presumed that the exhibition was eminently satisfactory as well as entertaining, but he has been remarkably reticent since the performance. The novel offerings were many and beautiful.—Boston Transcript

Who says the age of chivalry is dead? The other day an officer out in Davenport, Ia, attempted to arrest a bride just as she was, starting on her wedding trip, only because she had stolen $50 from somebody's trunk. But the gallant crowd wouldn't have it. They fired rocks and bad eggs into the unromantic policeman till he had to run for his life, and the bride got off with her $50 all safe. Young men should beware of the following paragraph, which was started by a Philadelphia paper, and is now going the rounds. The chances are that the man who wrote it is tied to a woman with a hand like a Japanese fan, and a voice that would make a buzz-saw pause in astonishment. It reads: 'Marriage is a safe way to gamble; if you win, you win a pile, and if you lose, you don't lose anything.'

The American handbooks concerning the usages of good society are at least equaled by a Parisian manual of savoir-vivre, from which the following passage is taken: 'In good society people always fold their notes or letters and fasten down the flaps or envelopes with the nails of the fingers. Inquiries are frequently made as to the reason why this should be done and why the tips of the fingers would not answer as well. The explanation is very simple. A letter should be scrupulously neat and the tips of the fingers are generally dirty!'

Young Rattleton Bragge (affably to middle-aged stranger, whom he finds alone in Browne's studio)—'Good picture, ain't it? Old Stilton's bought it. The Duke, you know. Browne's going down to Stilton's to shoot. Wish I could go with him, but I am booked in London till Christmas. Just my luck! Capital old boy, Stilton! Looks like an old clothesman. Gets tight after dinner; tells rummy stories; makes you roar. Fine old place; capital shooting. A wily jolly girl, the ladies Chamberbert. Nearly a dozen of 'em, all freckled. Duchess tremendous match-ker. Bag you before you can say Jack Robinson if you don't look out! A wily fun, the old Duchess. D' happen to know her by sight? Shiny red nose underhanging as a bulldog. Ah, here's Browne a last! (Enter Browne, suddenly.) 'Ah, Bragge, how are you. Let me introduce you to the Duke of Stilton.'—Parish.
