The Scientific American announces the discovery by Dr. E. R. Heath, along the previously unexplored borders of the Benl river, in Bolivia, of abundant rubber and chincona forests. As new rub. ber forests are to that part of the world what new gold fields are to the people of this country, it may readily be under-stood that the rubber "fever" became prevalent after the Doctor's announcement of his discovery, and thousands set out to penetrate the country of the cannibals where the forests are found. The exports of rubber, which was last year 15,000 pounds, is expected this year to reach the amount of 750,000 pounds, and next year 6,250,000.
