AMENDING THE CONSTITU TION.

The people of the United States live under two forms of Government-national and State, says the New York World. Tuey are governed by two systems of fundamental law. One is embodied in the Federal and the other in the State constitution.

There are thirty-sight State constitutions. Not one of the earlier and perbaps none of the later of these instruomissions overlooked by the framers; they have been modified from time to time and adapted to new circumstances and conditions brought about by growth and progress. The fundamental law of Rome, that Archbishop Ryan, of Selathe thirteen original States is vastly different to-day from what it was a century ago.

While the development of State constitutional law has kept pace with the advance of the times, the fundamental and Scranton, and ranks higher than law of the nation has undergone no such New York. It has a Catholic populadevelopment. It has never been gen- tion of over 600,000. Archbishop Ryan erally revised, as many of the State constitutions have been. It has receiv- adjutor to Archbishop Kenrick in 1872 ed fifteen independent amendments. Twelve of these were adopted so soon and theologian, and is generally regardafter the framing of the constitution ed as the ablest orator in the Catholic as to belong practically and essentially Church in America. His departure to the original instrument. The other from St. Louis will be the occasion for three grew out of extraordinary circum- universal regret, but his promotion is stances, and were carried to secure ex- hailed with proud satisfaction alike by ceptional ends.

the nation was in its infancy. The Louis, and his appearances on importframers were wise men and statesmen ed of the marvellous strides that the Archbishop Ryan's immediate predepopulation. material wealth and power. They did not realize nor provide for in June of last year. the social, political and industrial conditions and the governmental needs of a nation of fifty million people at the end of nearly a century's wondrous ties of the recent destructive wind

It is not strange, therefore, that the constitution of 1787 is not adapted to all the necessaities of to-day. In the national fundamental law, as in that of the several States, experience has brought to light defects and omissions. These, as we have said, bave from timeto time been remedied in the State constitutions, but the Federal constitution has been changed in but few of its provisions during the past eighty years, except by the Supreme Court, and the changes wrought by this tribunal have not always been for the better. It has repeatedly given to .Congress 'mischievous powers which the tounders of the government never intended to conter upon that body, and, on the other hand, it has stripped Congress of powers which they evidently designed it should

The importance of amending the constitution in certain particulars is general'y conceded. Every year numerous propositions to that effect are made in Congress. Some of these are mischievous, trivial or otherwise objectionable. But some are judicious and meet with general favor. Foremost in importance just now is the proposed amendment to take from Congress the power which the Supreme Court has just conceded to it to issue legal tender notes to any extent at any time. Authority to veto separate items in an appropriation bill has been given to the chief executive in many of the States with great advantage to the people. Why should not the same principle be extended to the national government? A few years ago the Supreme Court declared that Congress had no power to protect trademarks. There can be no valid objection to clothing Congress with such authority by constitutional amendment, and there are good reasons for doing so .. One of the most curious on issions in the constitution is the lack of power in Congress to legislate in the matter of marriage and divorce. It may pass uniform laws of naturalization, bankruptey, copy wright patents, &c., but it may not deal with her. what is of vastly more importance to the people-namely, the marital relation. The evils of our varying and conflicting laws of marriage and divorce are notorious. There is but one remedy, and that is uniform. Congress should have the power to enact such a law, and this would also enable it to deal most effectively with polygamy.

There are other questions touching the amendment of the constitution that demand attention and consideration. By the most favored mode of changing they will make broom-sticks of that instrument two-thirds of toth houses of Congress must propose an amendment, which to be adopted must then be ratified by three-fourths of the thrown into a back yard. States. This renders it well nigh impossible to make any dangerous, mischievous or objectionable change in the fundamental law of the nation, and puts an effective check on any injudic.

then, that any harm can come from florts to amend the constitution. On the contrary, ends of the greatest importance and value may be attained We trus that Congres will take up in earnest some of the desirable propositions now pending before it. There are several proposed amendments which are generally recognized to be good ones, and they can be carried if they are pushed with vigor. At any rate, they ought to be taken up and consid- that a single whale yielded, brought

> The experts at the United States signal office are studying the characteris storms and get ing at the laws that underlie their phenomena. According to these gentlemen the connection between the storms and the prevalence of sun spots is very remote, it any can be said to exist at all. They explain that tornadoes are due to a collision of warm and cold currents of a r, and are apt to be found in southern latitudes, therefore, in the early Spring, following the advance of warm weather Northward. Most of the cyclones originate in the Northwest, and commonly reach the Atlantic coast to the North of Washington. Kansas is pre-eminently the last. cyclone State, having had as many destructive storms of that description during the c ntary as the entire South. As a rule their worst to ce is spent before they reach the Atlantic seaboard. The laws of storms have long baffled the best scientific minds; in fact, until a comparatively tien to the stage. modern time it was supposed that there were no such laws but that the wind blew where it listed. But within a recognized place among the sciences. Methodical and thorough observations of the wind have been taken and many useful discoveries made. The most important, perhaps. is that almost all winds are rotary in character, so that a mariner, by observing the features of an approaching storm, can direct his vessel in such a course as to avoid its full fury. Much still remains in doubt. however, regarding the causes and nature of destructive storms, one reason being the suddenness of their approach on the parior floor. and the difficulties of measuring their velocity. At such times the wind-meter is generally blown away and the observer is in the cellar.

A remarkable decrease in blindness ments now exist in the form in which adelphia Archepiscopate of "Archbishop has been observed in England for every decade since 1851, and the percentage of decrease in the last ten years is larger than has been shown in any preceding enumeration. The fact is attributed to the recent advance in eye surgery, improved sanitation, and the diminished prevalence among children of purulent diseases, such as smallpox.

When you come to think of it, it is not odd that literary people prefer a pipe to a cigar. It is handier to smoke when they are writing, and ever so much cleaner. And then it gives them the true essence and flavor of the tobacco. The most fastidious smokers among all nations and all classes of men agree that the tobacco grown on the Golden Tobacco Belt of North Carolina is the most delic ious and refined in the world. Lighter than Turkish, more fragrant than Havana, freer from nitrates and nicotine than any other, it is just what the connoisseur praises and the habitual smoker demands. The very choicest tobacco grown on this Belt is bought by Blackwell's Durham Tobacco Co., and appears in their celebrated Bull Durham Smoking Tobacco. It is
