His Consecration as Bishop of the Diocese of East Carolina-Impressive Services at St. James' Church-Distinguished Divines in Attendance-Large Concourse of People.

Soon after 10 o'clock this morning the different avenues leading to St. James' Church began to be dotted with people who were wending their way thither to attend the solemn and impressive ceremonies attending the consecration of Bishop-elect Alfred Augustin Watson as Bishop of East Carolina. The morning was beautiful in the sunshine and glory of the flowering Spring time; the atmosphere was fragrant with the rich perfume of many scented flowers, and was musical with the songs of Spring birds, and everything invited humanity to devotional reflection. As the hour of 11 o'clock approached the throng in the streets became more dense and as they concentrated at the Bishop of South Carolina. portals of St. James' it became a stream of humanity flowing into the church. Policemen were stationed at the door this forenoon, the interest of the day to preserve order and prevent confusseeming to centre on the consecration ion, and attentive and polite ushers stood in readiness in the vestibul to supply the needed seats, a duty which they performed without the least delay or noise, and so expeditiously that nearly every seat in the house was filled in a very brief time. Chairs had been placed in the several aisles, but care had been taken to avoid the suffocation and disnight, and there were no cases for the tress which would be caused by an followed the Absolution, The Comforttickets, without which no one was entitled to a seat. By this wise precaution the house was filled, but not to the discomfort of any one.

> At a few minutes after 11 o'clock the full, rich tones of the organ, under the skillful hands of Mr. E. Thorpe, pealed forth a march, approuncing the entrance of the Bishops and Clergy, who walked up the centre aisle to the desk, which, with its surroundings, had been tastefully decorated with evergreens and flowers for the occasion. After they had become seated and the organ had ceased, the services were opened by the reading of the Collects and Commandments by Bishop Neeley, of Maine. These were followed by the reading of the Epistle by Bishop Seymour, of Springfield, I.l.; reading of the Gospel by Bishop Neeley, of Maine, and the Creed, by Bishop Seymour, of Springfield, Ill.; then by a hymn by the choir. Bishop Lyman, of North Carolina, then preached the sermon for the occasion, which was a logical, forceful and im pressive discourse; and in those portions where he alluded to the duties and responsibilities of the Bishop-elect and to his own heartfelt sorrow at the necessity which demanded a division of the Diocese, it was deeply pathet? ic and affecting. was listened to throughout with the

The certificate of Election and the Canonical Testimonial were then read by Rev. Nathaniel Harding, Secretary of the Diocesan Convention.
