HEAL THYSELF. Ferdinand Ward's last coup has resulted in involving the New York banks in a terrible muddle that promises to lead to internecine legal warfare of the bitterest kind. It will be remembered that the day before the suspension of Grant & Ward and the Marine Bank, this prince of financiers drew checks upon the First National Bank of New York for $212,000, although he had but a few hundred dollars in that bank. The checks were deposited with the Marine Bank, and when sent the next morning to the Clearing-house were credited to the Marine and charged against the First National. Very shortly afterwards the Marine closed its doors, and the First National found itself out $215,000, the Clearing-house refusing to charge back the amount to the Marine and credit it to the First National, on the ground that "the accounts between all the banks had been closed." The First National now asks to be made a preferred creditor of the Marine in the distribution of its assets. The receiver declines to recognize its claim, and says plainly that if litigation is necessary to do it the affair must be settled in that way. The Clearing-house must call on all the banks in the association with balances against the Marine on the exchanges of May 6, to pay back these debit balances against the Marine that day, which amounted to $770,063 17. Out of this the Clearing-house must pay the receiver $525,063 17, which, he claims, was illegally taken from the assets of the Marine Bank to make good its debit balance; then the First National could have its $215,000, which would be just the sum remaining with the Clearing-house. While this would be eminently satisfactory to the First National and the receiver, it will hardly be assented to by the other banks, for it makes them unsecured creditors of the Marine to the extent of $770,063 17. The receiver is, however, in earnest, apparently, and the warfare will be mixed and mighty.
